Sinai, sin'î [bush of the Lord], a mountain in the desert of Arabia, situated in the peninsula formed by the two gulfs of the Red Sea. The area of the peninsula of Sinai is about 11,500 square miles. It lies between the Gulf of Suez on the west and the Gulf of Akabah (Sinus Aelaniticus) on the east. 'It is one of the most mountainous and intricate regions on the face of the earth. It is a desert of rocks, gravel, and boulders; of gaunt mountain gorges and arid valleys and plateaus.' The Israelites come thither, Ex.19.1;-the ten commandments delivered from it, 20. 1, &c.; De. 5.4, &c.; -represents the law, Ga. 4 24;- the terrors of it not affecting Christians, He.12.18, &c. Horeb was probably the name of the mountain group of which Sinai formed a peak. There is much difference of opinion as to which of these peaks was Sinai; the peak of Sufsafeh, which rises abruptly from the plain of Râhah, answers most fully to the descriptions of Moses, and is in all probability the true 'Mount of the Law.' In the library of the famous 'convent of Mount Sinai,' Tischendorf found (4th Feb. 1859) the Codex Sinaiticus, which is the oldest and the only complete uncial MS. of the New Tostament hitherto discovered. According to him it was written in the fourth century by four different but contemporary scribes.

Year, is either solar, or lunar, or civil.
The solar year is measured by the apparent motion of the sun through the twelve signs of the zodiac, and consists of 365 days, 5 hours, and 48 minutes. The lunar is measured by so that two months included two moons, and the one of these years 354 days, and the other no less than 383 days. As the former of these falls eleven days short of the true or solar year, they were compelled, in order to keep their festivals at the proper season, to add a whole month to the year as often as it was needful, commonly once in three, and sometimes once in two years. This intercalary month was added at the end of the year, after the month Adar, and was therefore called I eadar, or a second Adar. The year was also distinguished into the civil, and the sacred or ecclesiastical year. The civil year commenced on the fifteenth of our September, because it was an old tradition that the world was created at that season; and by it they computed their jubilees, and dated all contracts, the birth of children, and the reign of kings. The months of this year, consisting alternately of twenty-nine and thirty days, are exhibited in the following table, with the corresponding months of our year:-

GARDENS OF DAMASCUS. [Genesis, ii:8-14.]—"And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed." The Garden of Eden was located, it is supposed by some, in the northeast of Arabia, at the junction of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers. Its real position, however, is in doubt. The picture, "Gardens of Damascus," is given here because Damascus comes nearer illustrating for us what an Eastern garden is, than any other city of which we know; and from the mountain we see here rising from the gardens of Damascus, an observer can see the mountains on the borders of the Eastern desert toward the confines of Mesopotamia, where the original Garden of Eden is supposed by some to have been situated. The gardens of Damascus are little enclosed plantations which encompass the city and extend for several miles into the plain.

CHAPTER I. Ver. I. That is, in the beginning of time, God created the elements out of which all things in heaven and earth were formed. According to the teachings of chemistry there are about seventy different kinds of atoms which are the elements God used as material to build the universe. He. 11. 3, 'Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear;' Ps. 102.25, 'Of old thou hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands; 2 Pe. 3. 5; Je. 10. 12; 51. 15; Ex. 31. 17; 20. 11; Ps. 33. 6, 9; 89. 11, 12; 146. 6; 148. 1-6; Is. 44. 24; Zec. 12. 1; Ac. 14. 15; 17. 24; 4. 24; ls. 42. 5; Re. 4. 11; 10. 6; 14. 7; Ro. 1. 19, 20; 11. 36. The word ELOHIM, here rendered God, is plural, and denotes the concurred in the creation of all things. I Co. 8. 6, 'The Father, of whom are all things;' Mat. II. 25, 'Heis Lord mals, and for the noblest of all—man. P.] of heaven and earth; Ep. 3. 9, 'God created all things

d Je.10.12;51.15. -a mere heading to the chapter; for it mentions the 'heaven' first, whereas in the following verses 'the earth' is first spoken of. This of itself is sufficient to show that ver. I refers to a prior act of God-an event anterior to those described in the subsequent part of the chapter. The terms 'heaven and earth' may mean the universe of mind and matter. Then heaven would include the celestial spheres with angels and spirits, and the earth would include all the animals which the researches of geology have brought to light, entombed in the various strata. The 'heaven and the earth,' whose creation is thus simply announced, embraced the whole pre-adamic universe. The fact of its creation at some undefined past age is recorded; and then it is indicated that from some cause the earth Worshipful Ones, the Divine Persons, who equally concurred in the creation of all things. observed laws of motion both on earth and in the heavens; but never can account for its origin. Moses, divinely instructed, ascribes it directly to the Spirit of God: From him originates also every spiritual movement of the soul in returning to God and entering his kingdom. Jn. 3. 5. C.—And the earth was, or had become, waste and desolate. Its physical features were reduced to utter confusion: its elements were in complete disorder—chaos reigned entirely. Darkness was upon the face of the deep. This implies that there was some dense mist or cloud hovering over the earth's surface, so as totally to exclude light from without. The introduction of light, and the succession of day and night, prove that at the very commencement of what is usually called the creative week the sun existed, and the diurnal motion of the earth on its axis was in operation. 16 And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth, 18 And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

Ver. 6. This firmament includes the region of the sun, moon, stars, and comets: and the air or atmosphere which surrounds our earth, and separates between the water which is in the clouds and that which is in the seas and rivers. 'Heart they proved in the heart of the control o under them;' 38. 22-26, 'Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, and of the hail, which I have reserved? Who hath divided a water-course for the overflowing of waters, to cause it to rain upon the earth?' Job 37. 11; Ec. 11. 3; Ps. 148. 4.-[The firmament, or more literally 'the expanse,' is the atmosphere. At first the body of water on the earth's surface seems to have been in contact with another form of water like a dense mist, hovering over the earth. By the atmosphere, and the light acting upon it, the mist was absorbed, and raised in the form of clouds high above the earth. The Hebrew word translated 'above' in ver. 7 signifies 'upon,' as a sustaining power, thus describing with scientific precision the action of the atmosphere in supporting the water. P.]

Ver. 7. [The use of the word 'made' in this and other parts of the narrative must be carefully noted. It must not be confounded with 'created.' 'In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.' He called the universe into existence; but all his subsequent work upon inanimate matter was a work of rearrangement, which is expressed by the word made, or some such phrase as 'let there be.' P.]

The purpose of the writer of Genesis was not to give a scientific description of the order of Creation, but it was to make it clear that God was the author of all things. Moses saw that God and not chance was the creator of all.

Ver. 14. According to verse 14 God appointed the sun to be the great light in the firmament and the moon to reflect that light. The sun is in itself a very extensive body of light; and the moon, though it hath no light in itself, enlightens our earth by reflecting the light or the sun; and both are called great lights, since by reason of their nearness they appear to us much larger than any of the stars. These lights not only form the day and night, but also form demption. - The image of God on man includes, (1) The or mark out the seasons of sowing, planting, reaping, sailing, travelling, or the like; and are for signs of the weather, and sometimes of remarkable phenomena. Ver. 26. The plural is not here used for the singular in the manner of some modern kings. There is not in Scripture one instance of a sovereign's speaking of himself only in the plural number, we, us, our. But the plural us here denotes a consultation of the divine Persons concerning the production of that species of creatures which was to be the most perfect under heaven, and in which the glory of God was to be for ever most illustriously manifested in his work of reresemblance of his soul, in respect of spiritual substance, understanding, and will. REFLECTIONS.—Stand still, my soul, and consider this wonderful work of God! O how his eternal power and Godhead shine forth in forming so vast, so well furnished worlds of creatures, rational and irrational, animate and inanimate! What infinite wis-

Light and celestial luminaries, in their mysterious nature, extensive range, prodigious but duly proportioned distance, rapid motions, and powerful influences—Air, fixed and unfixed, inflammable and uninflammable, in its fluidity, weight, elasticity, and usefulness for forming of wind, promoting of animal life, transmission of light, and the like—Water, in its fluidity, plenteousness, dispersion, saltness or freshness, penetration, and fitness for forming rains, dews, sea-productions: and for promoting trade and intercourse between nations— Earths, stones, metals, moulds, in their adhesion, ductility, forms, colours, and uses-Vegetables, in their structure, growth, curious parts, almost infinitely diversified forms, colours, and uses-Animals, in their curious parts, connected structure, mysterious life, and dependence on food; their motions in limits, fitness for procreation and self-preservation, beautiful forms, melodious, awful, or plaintive sounds, exquisite and diversified smell and taste: and, along with these, the unlimited divisibility of matter, the laws of air, attraction, gravitation, electricity, magnetism, of muscular motion, and of nervous influences-Rational spirits, in their powers of thinking, willing, recollection, sociality, and union with bodies—as proofs of the existence and manifestations of the mysterious nature and manifold perfections of God, my God in Christ, of whom, through whom, and to whom, are all things. Let me always consider his creatures as memorials of his creature, preserving dom appears marked in the vast variety, the comely and ruling powers, and as means of delightfully and order, and the mutual subserviency of all things to the good of one another, and to his glory! The honour or dishonour of the Sabbath has ever been the means and the evidence of a fruitful or barren, a growing or a withering, church. -Seventh. Here commences that remarkable reference to the number SEVEN, that will be found to continue to the end of the Scriptures. Six days of blessed work, closed by a seventh of sanctified rest, is the original week of creation, and well represents every form of perfection exhibited in the subsequent working of God. -Sanctified. This sanctification includes the separation of the day from common uses, and the dedication of it to the service of God. C.]

Ver. 4. [This is the commencement of a new section, and also, as it appears, of a new narrative, to a large extent complete in itself. It is a narrative of creation from a human point of view; whereas the first section of the book contains a narrative of creation from a divine point of view. The first narrative embraces the universe, giving a full account of the origin of the vege-table and animal world. The second is mainly concerned with man, and those things necessary for his support. In the first the divine Being is uniformly called Elohim, a name expressive of infinite power; in the second he is called Jehovah Elohim, expressing power in conjunction with immutability, so as to inspire man with implicit faith. Jehovah is the incommunicable name of God; it is not, and it cannot be, given to another. In our version it is almost universally rendered LORD.—This section terminates with the

This clause may be translated, 'No plant of the field was yet in the land, and no herb of the field put forth shoots; for,' &c. The meaning is, that while herbs and plants had been originally formed by an immediate exercise of supernatural power, they were left to propagate and spread naturally. Hence moisture and cultivation were requisite. This explanation appears to be given as introductory to the account of the planting of the garden of Eden, and the arrangements made for its irrigation and culture. P.]

The topographical notice here, though very brief, is definite.

Eden was a large district. The garden was in the eastern part of it. A river flowing through Eden entered the garden; and either in the garden, or after emerging from it, separated into four distinct channels. Two of these bear the names of two well-known rivers, the Euphrates and Tigris; but by no legitimate mode of interpretation can they be identified with those rivers as they now exist. There is no known spot whose physical features accord with the description of the text; it is vain therefore to speculate about the site of Eden. P.—Ver. 9. Tree of life. To the Euphrates Moses refers, ver. 14, as to an object of perfect familiarity to the people whom he was leading from Egypt; and Hiddekel is identified (Da. 10. 4) with the Tigris. The Pison has been supposed to be the Phasis, a river running into the Euxine; the Gihon, to be the Araxes, which runs into the Caspian. Ver. 16, 17. Here we have God entering into a covenant of works with Adam, and with all his natural posterity in him. This is the covenant afterwards published from Sinai, and which gendereth to bondage, Ga. 4. 24. This is the covenant which Adam transgressed, Ho. 6. 7. The breach of this covenant was necessarily supposed by the remedial one, published after the fall, Ge. 3. 15; Ro. 5. 12-21. The annexing of death to a positive command of abstinence from fruit, indifferent in itself, by an infinitely good, gracious, and wise God, inferred likewise the annexing of a glorious reward to his obedience: and in this the form of a covenant consists. The adjoining of the tree of life, and of knowledge of good and evil, to this transaction, as confirmatory seals of life or death; the frequent republication of the moral law, in a covenant form, to men, when they could not keep it as such, Le. 18. 5; De. 27. 26; Mat. 19. 17; Ga. 3. 10, 12; Ro. 10. 5; 3. 27, but especially the crediting of Adam's first sin to his natural posterity Ro. 5. 12-19, plainly establish this point. Here we have the parties of a covenant: God, manifesting his supreme authority, his unbounded goodness, and infinite condescension, on the one hand; and Adam, as without sin and righteous, capable of performing whatever God required, Ge. 1. 26, 27; 5. 1; Ec. 7. 29, and as the common head and representative of all his posterity, Ro. 5. 12-19; 1 Co. 15. 22, on the

(5) To be a summary of the law of nature, by obedience to which he might honour God, loving him with all his heart, soul, mind, and strength, and loving himself, and his posterity as himself. Here is a penalty threatened in case of disobedience-certain, manifold, and dreadful death, viz. (1) Death legal, or a sentence of condemnation fixing upon the covenant-breaker in the very moment he begins to transgress. (2) The execution of this sentence in real death; which is either spiritual, comprehending everything relative to the soul's loss of God's favour and image, and to its defilement and misery in this life, Ro. 1. 28-31; 3. 10-18; 8. 7, 8; Ep. 2. 1, 3, 12; or natural, which comprehends every calamity on the body, and whatever its comfort depends upon in this world, Ge. 3. 16, 19; De. xxviii.; Ec. 12. 7; 2 Pe. 3. 12; or eternal, comprehending all the misery of loss or of pain, to which the lost are for ever subjected in hell, Mat. 25. 41; Re. 14. 10, II.—In the express annexing of so great a death especially to the breach of the positive part of the law of the covenant, a promise of a life directly opposite as the reward of perfect fulfilment of the condition was implied; comprehending the continuance of the natural and spiritual life, which he had, in all the vigour, comfort, and prosperity of it; and the enjoyment of a more glorious and eternal life in heaven, in consequence of his finishing his course of unfailing obedience. Thus the sum of the covenant was, Mat. 19. 17, 'If thou wilt enter into life eternal, keep the commandments; Ga. 3. 10, 12, 'The man that doeth these things shall live in them;' 'Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them;' Eze. 18. 4, 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die.' it is more certain that he moved the doubt relative to | able covenant of friendship with himself. (3) It was | God's prohibitory charge in such ambiguous terms that it was hard to discern whether he intended merely to ask if God had really forbidden the use of that fruit,or to insinuate that the forbidder could not be the true God, who had kindly created them but just before.-or to suggest that God was a hard master, who had forbidden them to eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden in which he had placed them. (4) Finding that the woman adhered to the command, he endeavoured to make her believe that the threatening was dark in its meaning, and uncertain or false with respect to its execution. (5) He pretended a great regard for her and her husband's welfare, as if he had been extremely desirous of promoting their knowledge and happiness. (6) Perhaps he pretended that himself had acquired what knowledge he had above other brutes by eating of that prohibited fruit. It is certain he attempted to confirm his contradiction of the threatening by a solemn appeal to God. (7) Having prevailed with the woman, he by her means tempted her husband, who complied, not from any such fondness for her as rendered him willing to transgress with her, but as deceived: and the rather as he saw she did not immediately die upon her eating of the fruit. This sin of our first parents, in eating this forbidden fruit, was exceeding great. It contained, (1) Horrid unbelief to such a degree that the devil, in the form of a beast, was believed in opposition to the solemn declaration of God. (2) The most presumptuous pride, ambition, and bold curiosity; they were in paradise, and lords of the lower worldthey knew and enjoyed very much-but nothing would content them but to be as God in knowledge and happiness. (3) The most shocking ingratitude and discontent; God had given them everything proper for conveniency and delight—he had made them the lords of animals and earth, the companions of angels-and they revolted at the inconsiderable reserve of a tree. (4) The most contemptuous apostasy from and tree. (4) The most contemptuous apostasy from and rebellion against God; they renounced his covenant of that Eve here stated the first untruth, by adding to the friendship, and threw off all subjection to and professed | commandment of God (ch. 2. 16, 17); but there is no very early committed, perhaps on the same day they were created, Ps. 49. 12. (4) It was committed against God's most express command, and when they had the fullest warning of the danger thereby incurred to them and their seed. (5) It was committed in paradise, where God dwelt as in his temple; and where every thing concurred to proclaim his infinite kindness to mankind, and invite to obedience. (6) It was committe upon a very slight and but one single tempta-(7) It was occasioned by an object of very small importance, which man had no need of in paradise. (8) It respected what had been solemnly separated to the service of God, and so amounted to a sacrilegious robbing of him. In this manner, 1 Ti. 2.14, 'The woman being deceived, was first in the transgression,' Ro. 5.12-19, 'By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for, or in whom, all have sinned. - Death reigned over them which had not sinned actually after the similitude of Adam's transgression. Through the offence of one many be dead.—The judgment was by one to condemnation.—By one man's offence death reigned by one.— By the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation.—By one man's disobedience many were made sineers; I Co. 15. 22, 'In Adam, by his first sin, all die.'—[Ver. I. The character of the temptation strikingly illustrates the wiliness of the 'old serpent.' There is nothing at first to awaken suspicion, or to shock the moral sense. There is a sly insinuation calculated to excite natural curiosity. Then there is an assertion embodying a direct lie, combined, however, with just enough of truth to give it plausibility 'Ye shall not die; for God doth know,' &c. The temptations of Satan still exhibit the same fatal craftiness—the same knowledge of the weakness of human nature. —It will be observed that while by the historian consciences being touched with a sense of the beinousness of their sin, whereby they had defiled their souls, and of the greatness of that misery which they had brought upon themselves and their posterity, they began to be ashamed of their nakedness, which they now found to be an occasion of sinful motions and affections; and covered with fig-leaves those parts by which the corruption of nature is propagated, upon which, for that reason, God hath put the deepest impression of shame, that fruit of sin; and to which he appointed circumcision, the sacrament of remission, regeneration, and mortification, to be applied, ch. 17. 11. (2) When the Son of God, probably in human shape, as a presage of his future incarnation, came to seek and to save them, they, sensible of guilt and dreading punishment, foolishly sought to hide themselves from him. But 'there is no darkness, nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves,' Job 34. 22; Am. 9. 3; Ps. 139. 7-9; Pr. 15. 3; Je. 23. 24. (3) When, o convince them further, he questioned them concerns ng their conduct, they attempted to excuse themselves, nd shift the blame upon their tempters; and Adam ppears inclined to lay the blame of his fault upon God himself, as if he had given him a tempter under the himself, as if he had given him a tempter under the character of an helpmeet for him, Job 31. 33; Pr. 19. 3.

—[Ver. 8. 'The voice of the Lord' may signify, as in Ps. 29. 3, some manifestation of his presence in terrible commotion of the elements, which filled the guilty pair with fear; or it may perhaps be the name of the second person of the blessed Trinity, and thus equivalent to the Greek Logos.—'The wind of the day' is in the East the evening, when a cool refreshing breeze always springs up, and makes walking agreeable. Ver. 14-19. In this condemnation of the criminals, the serpent, which had been only an irrational instrument, is cursed, as a mark of God's high detestation of the crime; as Ex. 21. 28, 29; Le. 20. 15. THE ABANA RIVER PASSING THE GARDENS OF DAMASCUS—THE. CITY KNOWN TO ABRAHAM. [Genesis, iii:23.]—"Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken." In the blooming season, the trees which stand in the Gardens of Damascus are very attractive, because of their great variety and the luxuriance of their foliage and flowers. The Damson or Damascene plum gets its name from growing in the Gardens of Damascus. Here we have the orange, the apricot, the white mulberry, and alternating with these fruit trees, rose bushes and other flowering shrubs stand thick upon the ground. Because of this it is not difficult to persuade one's self that Damascus represents more in a living way the paradise in which our first parents lived for a while, than any other city upon earth. The Garden of Eden was created and perpetuated by the rivers of Mesopotamia, and Damascus is created and kept green by the Abana river.

17 And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it; cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life:

His power is restricted to earthly men, or to killing of the bodies of believers—for their souls he cannot kill; nay, their temporal death promotes the destruction of sin in them. He takes such pleasure as he is capable of in seducing reprobates to the basest wickedness, and in vexing the godly with his abominable temptations. God further threatens that the very woman whom he had seduced, and many of her posterity, should, by their free justification and their reconcilement and conversion to God, be made stated enemies to him and his friends, and enabled, through Jesus Christ, to tread on his policy, power, and his life of permitted authority on earth, to his great grief and agony of mind, notwithstanding all he should be able to do to oppose them by temptation or persecution. But the principal part of Satan's curse lay in the ruin brought on him by Jesus Christ, the eminent seed of the woman, in his redemption of mankind. Jesus Christ is called the seed of the woman, not only to import the reality of his manhood, and his close connection with believers-who are also called her seed, as followers of her in faith and holiness-but chiefly to signify that he was none of Adam's natural posterity represented in the covenant of works, and that he would be born of a virgin. He, by fulfilling the broken law-which is the strength of sin-in our stead, by making atonement for sin, and by removing the curse, has undermined the whole power and authority which Satan had over the world as the execuhoner of God's justice. And as by the word of his power he dislodged him from the bodies of multitudes -and by the word of his grace in the ministration of the gospel did and will expel the worship of him from multitudes of nations; so by the powerful application of his word, Spirit, and blood, to men's consciences and hearts, he casts him and his works down from their throne in them, and by the influences of his grace enables his people to resist the devil, and make him flee from them; and to mortify the deeds of the body that they may live. Thus, I Pe. 5. 8, 'Our adversary the devil goeth about seeking whom he may devour;' Job 1.7, 'Going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it; Jn. 8. 41, 44, 'Wicked men are of their father the devil, and the lusts of their father they will do;' Ac. 13. 10; 1 Jn. 3. 8, 10; Mat. 13. 38; Ro. 9. 8, 'Only the children of the promise are counted for Eve's seed, Ga. 4. 29; Pr. 29. 27, An unjust man is an abomination to the just; and he that is upright in the way is an abomination to the wicked; Jn. 15. 18; Mar. 13. 13; but, I Jn. 3. 5, 8, 'The Son of God was manifested to take away sin—to destroy the works of the devil;' Is. 7. 14, 'A virgin did conceive, and bring forth a Son-Immanuel; Da. 9. 24, 26, 'The Messiah shall be cut off, not for himself, but to finish transgression, and make sin are not pronounced or executed solely upon rational an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, beings; irrational creatures, and even the fruits of the and to bring in an everlasting righteonsness; Ps. 91. 13, field, and the very earth itself, are visited 'The lion, adder, and dragon shall be trampled under judgments. The woman was condemned to a multitude of sorrows and pains, particularly in the conception, bearing, and bringing up of her children; and to a further degree of subjection to her husband, whom she had overlooked in parleying with the serpent as her instructor. 1 Ti. 2. 12, 15; 1 Co. 7. 28; 14. 34; Tit. 2. 5; 1 Pe. 3. 6; Ep. ii. iv.; Mat. 19. 8, &c. To punish Adam, the proprietor, the whole ground was cursed with respect to its soil and product. The whole lower world, being defiled under its inhabitants, was devoured by the curse, and subjected to the bondage of corruption. 1s. 24. 5, 6; Ro. 8. 20-22; Ge. 5. 29; Job 31. 40; He. 6. 8; Je. 12.13. Himself was condemned to much grief and sorrow. Ps. 127. 2. To eat the herbs of the field, instead of the delicious fruits of paradise; and to be occupied in hard the agency and success of Satan the destroyer, and of the incarnation, office, state, and work of Jesus our Redeemer; and in fine, of the whole fate of this lower world, particularly of mankind, from the fall of Adam till the end of time. Nor can any one seriously review the state of the world-of fields, of persons, of families, of churches, or nations, for almost six thousand years past, but he must perceive a constant and exact accomplishment thereof. Nor are the subsequent predictions, whether of mercies or judgments, anything else but a gradual opening and explication of this; the latter always pointing out more clearly and circumstantially what had been contained in the former; nor are the histories aught else but an account of the fulfilment. But one thing is remarkable, that in this declaration of Jehovah now before us the first intimation of a Saviour, and salvation through him for mankind, is not directed to Adam or Eve, but is included in a threatening directed to Satan, plainly intimating that the work of our redemption remarkably aggravates the misery of our original destroyer, and that we are not immediate parties in the covenant of our recovery, nor doth it, either in point of reality or application, depend on our work, but on the blood of Jesus Christ, and the faith we exercise in it. Ro. 5. 20, 21; Ép. 2.1-8. [Ver. 14. It is worthy of observation here, as elsewhere in Scripture, that the curses consequent upon

Ver. 20. Having heard, and perhaps believed, the promise relative to the seed of the woman, Adam gives his wife a new name, importing her being the mother of Jesus, the quickening spirit, and author of eternal life, and of his living members. Jn. 10. 10; 11. 25.

Ver. 21. The Lord, who had taught them to offer animals in sacrifice, as a figure of Jesus' oblation of himself for the salvation of men, taught them to make coats of the skins, as a memorial that by sinfully hearkening to the serpent they had made themselves as the beasts which perish, and that there could be no salvation from shame and danger but by the garment of Jesus' blessed atonement. 1s. 61. 10; Ro. 13. 14.

Ver. 22. Perhaps we have here no ironical derision of man's folly in attempting to become wise as God: but God's affectionate lamentation over his ruined condition, and gracious resolution to turn him out of paradise, lest his vain hopes to fortify himself against death, by eating of the tree of life, should tempt him to neglect the great sarvation which was one red to min in the coverage in the great sarvation which was one red to min in the coverage in the cultivation of them till he died. 2 Th. 3. Io; Ep. 4. 28; Ec. 1. 1, 2, 13, 14; 2. 11, 17, 21, 26. Thus in these few verses we have a predictory description of the counsel of the Divine Elohim, or Holy and the counsel of the Divine Elohim, and the counsel of the Divine Elohim, and the counsel of the Divine Elohim, and the counsel of the Divine Elohim, and the counsel of the Divine Elohim, and t the great salvation which was offered to him in the cove-Trinity, in the formation of man is revealed. When in ch. 3. 22 God says, 'The man is become as one of us, to know good and evil,' the word 'us' must refer as in the former case to the Godhead, but who in the Godhead had knowledge of good and evil? even the Son, whose eternal delights were with the children of men (Pr. 8. 31), who loved his people 'before the foundation of the world,' and who in the fulness of time was 'made a curse for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.' The word evil here does not signify moral evil, but that sorrow, toil, and death, inflicted as natural evils, with which alone he that 'knew no sin,' yet who 'bore our griefs, and catried our sorrows,' was acquainted. C.—The plural form of the name of God, Elohim; the expression, 'Let us make man;' and here again the statement, 'The man is become as one of us;' all appear to shadow forth the wondrous doctrine of plurality in unity-three persons, and yet one God.-It would undoubtedly appear from this statement that there was some inherent virtue in the fruit of the tree of life calculated to preserve life indefinitely. It would seem too as if man before the fall was rendered immortal by eating of the tree of life; for if he was created immortal, the tree of life was unnecessary. P.]

Ver. 23, 24. The words used for the turning of man out of paradise import that he was turned out as a divorced woman from the house of her husband, never to be admitted back to a state of happiness under the broken covenant of works. Perhaps while the flaming sword turned every way to keep men from the tree of

REFLECTIONS.—Be sober, be vigilant, my soul, lest thine adversary the devil get an advantage of thee, and beguile thee through his subtlety. Never encounter him, separated from Jesus, or in thy own strength. Never dally with, but boldly and immediately resist him, and he will flee from thee. Never indulge the smallest doubt of the veracity or importance of what the Lord hath spoken. Let me always be content with such things as I have. It is not in becoming a god, but in enjoying God, as my ALL AND IN ALL, that my happiness consists. In what shame, what misery, sin always issueth!-Behold how the offended majesty of heaven flies on the wings of infinite love and mercy for the immediate relief of self-ruined men, and to proclaim, offer, and bestow upon them redemption through the blood of his Son! But alas! how they flee from him, and by covering their transgression, endeavour even to evade his favours! Blessed Jesus, if thou arraignest me, let me always fly into thy bosom of mercy and kindness; let me gladly entertain thy convictions, and acknowledge my offence, that I may not fall into the condemnation of the devil! Let all the troubles which affect this world call my sin to my remembrance, and deeply affect me with it! CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. If Eve thought that in Cain she had gotten THE MAN—JEHOVAH, THE MES-SIAH, as the words in the Hebrew may bear, she found herself sadly mistaken. —[Some translate 'I have gotten a man—Jehovah,' and believe that Eve supposed him to be the promised seed, who was to bruise the serpent's head. But the passage will not bear such a rendering. The emphatic word is kanithi, 'I have gotten;' hence the son was called Cain, which comes from the same root; and the sense of the whole is, 'I have gotten a man from (or with the assistance of) Jehovah.' P.]

Cain, still enraged in his heart, murdered his righteous brother on account of his piety, Ps. 55. 21; 1 Jn. 3. 12. Abel's blood cried to God for just vengeance upon Cain, He. 12. 24. God, notwithstanding Cain's denial and insulting pretence that he had given him no charge of his brother, condemned him to punishment, and cursed the fields which he should cultivate into a further degree of barrenness, Ps. 9. 12. Cain never lamented the heinousness of his sin, but complained that it could not be pardoned, and that his punishment was too great; and that now everybody would be ready to kill him, as the public enemy of mankind, and devoted of God to destruction. But God marked him with some visible token, and denounced a still heavier vengeance against the person who should kill him. Thus, Job. 18. 11; 15. 20-24. Terrors made him afraid on every side, and drove him to his feet. He travelled in pain all his days, &c.—Le, 26, 17, 36. 'But God slew him not, lest kis people should forget,' Ps. 59. II.—[Ver. 5. Why was this? The apostle Paul replies, 'By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent (literally, a fuller) sacrifice than Cain.' The faith was shown in the nature of the offering. Cain's was an acknowledgment of God's sovereignty-it was the offering of a Deist. Abel's, in addition, was an acknowledgment of guilt, of the necessity for an atonement—it was the offering of a humble, conscience-stricken sinner. P.

Contrary to God's original institution of marriage, and the stated equality preserved by his providence among the males and females of mankind, Lamech, the descendant of Cain, to gratify his intemperate lust, first took a plurality of wives, and introduced a custom which still remains in many places of the world; and with which not a few of the pious Hebrews, inadvertent to the sinfulness thereof, complied; Ge. xvi. xxix.; 2 Sa. iii. v. 1 Ki. xi., &c. on other occasions.—[It is evident from this passage] that at the birth of Enos some remarkable change took place in the manner in which the people of God paid their homage to the divine Being. It would seem that hitherto the worship had been chiefly ritualistic—by sacrifices and oblations; and that this had largely degenerated into a cold and heartless formalism. Now, however, the true nature of God, as expressed by the name Jehovah, began to be fully apprehended; and the consequence was that spiritual worship was given to him-'Then it was begun to invoke the name of Jehovah.' The phrase is impersonal. In the Hebrew there is no equivalent to 'men.' The mode of invocation was doubtles by prayer, both private and social; and God was invoked as JEHOVAH—the immutable, promising, and faithful God. The descendants of Cain devoted themselves to the pursuit of the arts and sciences, but the children of Seth rose to a true sense of man's dignity as an accountable and immortal being.

HE PILGRIMS—TENTING IN THE CITY WHERE CHRIST WAS BROUGHT UP. [Genesis, iv:20.]—"He was the father of such as dwell in tents." In the twentieth verse of the fourth chapter of Genesis, tents are mentioned for the first time in the Bible. Many people continue to live in tents in Palestine, and the tents used by the natives to-day do not vary much from such as were used in the early history of the country. They are woven of goat's hair and last a long time. The picture given above is of the traveling tent used by the parties who were sent to Bible lands to get the pictures of Bible places which illustrate this work. This modern tent, with apartments, carpets, iron bedsteads, and every convenience necessary to comfort, is as far from the tents of the Bedouins in Palestine, as Western civilization is from the primitive civilization of the crude sons of the desert. The modern tent we here see stands in Nazareth, near the Greek Church, and just above the Fountain of the Virgin.

In the early ages of the world Providence wisely ordered it that people should live long, for the speedy replenishing of the world, and for the more effectual propagation of the true religion and other useful knowledge; and, no doubt, the superior wholesomeness of the air, and of their diet, and their temperance in the use of it, contributed to promote this longevity.

REFLECTIONS.—Whilst I read, let me with deep concern cry out, 'How is the gold become dim, and the most fine gold changed!' Behold how death reigns, through sin, from Adam to Noah; and how sure, though sometimes slowly, it strikes! Ah! what a nothing must I, my age, and all my labours be in his sight, before whom the long, long lives of ten patriarchs and replenished world make so insignificant a figure! To be born, to breathe, to rear up a family, and give up the ghost, how mean! Yet this is all of man! and how few, in a replenished world, are worthy of God's lovel Let theretore Enoch, who walked with God, or rather Jesus, the dedicated servant of God,—Jesus, who set the Lord always before him, and did always the things which pleased the Father—Jesus, who fore-Ver. 29. Ver. 20. It was common for the patriarchs to erect altars and offer sacrifices of thanksgiving for mercies received, and for the expiation of their own guilt, as in the case of Abraham, ch. 12. 7, 8; 13. 18; Isaac, 26. 25; Jacob, 35.7; and Moses, Ex. 17. 15. These were typical of Christ our New Testament altar, as the sacrifices were of his oblation of himself, He. 10. 10-15.

Ver. 18. [The last clause of this verse is manifestly inserted as introductory to the painful incident which is narrated below. The mind of the writer being specially directed to that incident, he naturally connects Canaan with Ham. It would seem, too, from the tenor of the whole narrative, that Canaan must have been in some way implicated. Probably he was the first who discovered Noah, and then told his father. P.]

Ver. 24. [Some suppose that this expression, which may be translated 'his little son,' applies to Canaan, Noah's grandson. This, however, is contrary to the idiom of the Hebrew. There can be no doubt that the words apply to Ham, and ought to be rendered 'his youngest son,' thus indicating Ham's position in the family of Noah. P.]

Ver. 25-27. These predictions are greatly extensive: almost every prediction in Scripture relative to the Egyptians, Canaanites, Tyrians, and Sidonians, is comprehended in this repeated curse of Canaan. Almost every prediction relative to the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, and Arabs, and especially what relates to the Jewish nation and Jesus Christ, is included in the blessing of Shem. Almost every prediction relative to the Greeks, Romans, Goths, Tartars, and Turks, and espemuch of the history of nations

The most rich or fertile parts years past they have been enslaved by the Ishmaelite Saracens descended from Shem, or by the Seljukian and Ottoman Turks descended of Japheth. And what multitudes of the Western Africans were formerly bought for slaves by the English, and further by the Spaniards, the French, Portuguese, and Dutch, and condemned to the hardest drudgery in their American plantations! It was Canaan, I suppose, who first saw the nakedness of Noah, and told his father of it. His posterity first settled in the west of Asia, and the curse hath pursued them in a still more remarkable manner. About A.M. 2079 Chedorlaomer and his Elamite descendants of Shem rendered tributary the Canaanitish kingdoms of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar. Upon their revolt he invaded and pillaged their country, Ge. xiv. Not long after they, Zoar excepted, were destroyed with fire and brimstone from heaven, for their unnatural lewdness and other abominations, Ge. xix. The Hebrews, chiefly under Moses, Joshua, and Barak, cut off most of the other Canaanites, and seized on their country, Nu. xxi.; Jos. vi. -xix.; Ju. iv. The Gibeonites and others, whose lives were spared, were subjected to slavery, Jos. ix.; Ju. i.; 2 Sa. v. Solomon had more than 150,000 of them employed as slaves in the building of the temple, I Ki. 9. 20, 22; 5. 15, 16. They who settled in the north-west of Canaan, and formed the once flourishing states of Tyre and Sidon, were by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Persians, but chiefly by the Greeks, Romans, Saracens, and Turks, cially what relates to the gospel-church among the Gentiles, is contained in the blessing of Japheth. For two thousand years, from the death of Noah to that of Christ, the knowledge of the true religion and the new covenant relation to God, as his church and people, were almost wholly confined to them, particularly to the Jews; and from them the Messiah, the Lord from heaven, had his human descent; and from them the apostolic founders of the gospel church did spring. The sons of Japheth were Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech, and Tiras. Their descendants, the Celts or Gauls, the Tartars, Medes, Greeks, Romans, Goths, Turks, &c., prodigiously multiplied, and peopled the whole of Europe, the northern half of Asia, and I suppose most of America. For many ages they have been settling themselves in the original habitations of the posterity of Shem. The Medes, assisted by the Chaldeans, overturned the Assyrian empire; and afterwards, assisted by the Persians. whom they had subdued, ruined the Chaldean. Perhaps it was their Scythian brethren who about two hundred years after founded the powerful monarchy of the Parthians in Persia and the places about; while multitudes of the overstocked Gauls from Europe invaded Asia, and partly took up their residence in Mesopotamia. About three hundred and thirty years before the birth of our Saviour, the Greeks, under Alexander, overran Asia to the river Indus, and for several ages held it in subjection. Next the Romans pushed their conquests into Syria, Assyria, and Canaan; and for more than seven hundred years retained what they could of it. For many ages the Tartarian Huns and

and founded an empire in Persia, and another in Westem India, which still subsists under the Great Mogul. For about three hundred years the Ottoman Turks have been masters of Assyria, Syria, Canaan, and the places about; while the Portuguese, the Spaniards, the English, the Dutch, the Danes, and French, have been rendering themselves masters of islands or settlements, almost innumerable, in the East Indies. Thus there is scarce one single country of note which originally pertained to the offspring of Shem but is now possessed or governed by the enlarged posterity of Japheth, Arabian Hejiaz excepted. Multitudes too of the posterity of Japheth in Asia and America, but chiefly in Europe, have been persuaded of God to embrace the true religion, and become his church, ever since the Jews were rejected. The far greater part of that race known to us do, and for many ages have, at least in word, made profession of the Christian faith, while very few of the descendants of Shem or Ham have so much as pretended it. Nor do I remember that the Christian religion ever had a public establishment from one of them, the Abyssinians excepted. What an exact, an explicatory, and confirming counterpart is the whole providence of God to his word! What understanding of the divine authenticity of the scriptures, and of the love and faithfulness of God, may 1 attain by a wise and careful observation thereof!—[Ver. 27. This remarkable prophecy is given in the form of a short poem, and consists of three parts—a curse upon Canaan, and a blessing upon Shem and Japheth. But it will be observed that

But dreadful is the curse, lasting and extensive the disfavour, which awaits those who contemn and deride their aged parents! whire blessings shall be on their head who regard them, and cover their infirmities. But let me not bid adieu to the dying patriarch, till in him I contemplate the great God my Saviour! His name is a bed of rest and source of comfort. He is the distinguished favourite of Heaven. In the midst of a crooked and perverse generation he dared to be singularly good: at once he gave an unblemished pattern of uprightness, and boldly preached righteonsness in the great congregation. To him mankind owe their recovery from ruin. By him the church is gradually built up as the mean of our salvation, and his believers are rendered true members thereof. Upon the savour of his sweet-smelling sacrifice God hatb promised no more to curse the world. With him and believers is the new covenant for ever established; and to them are the inheritance and rules each blessing embodies, while it illustrates, the first church, the vineyard of the Lord of hosts, planted and of the new covenant state conferred. The "place of Sichem, unto of Sichem," referred to was afterward known as Shechem, and now is called Nablous. Shechem, or Nablous, is built between the mountains Ebal and Gerizim. It is more completely at the foot of Mount Gerizim. The mount really slopes down into the town. This is the first town mentioned in Palestine connecting it with the history of God's chosen people. Abraham erected an altar here and consecrated the place to the worship of Jehovah, and after the children of Israel took possession of the country, the bones of Joseph were deposited at Shechem, in the parcel of land which Jacob purchased of the children of Hamor, the father of Shechem, for a hundred pieces of silver. Ver. 28. [The Hebrew word is Kasdim, but our translators have adopted the name Chaldea from the Greek. As a geographical term it has a wide signification, embracing the whole country of Mesopotamia, with the region extending southward to the Persian Gulf. Chaldea proper was confined to the plain on both banks of the Euphrates from Babylon southward to the Tigris. The city of Ur has been recently identified with the vast mounds of Mugheir or Mugayer, about 90 miles S.E. of Babylon, on the west bank of the Euphrates. On bricks dug up from the mounds of Mugheir the name Ur has been discovered by Loftus. It is worthy of note that Mugheir signifies 'Mother of

Ver. 31. [Terah, instead of striking right across the Arabian desert to Palestine, went north-west along the banks of the Euphrates. It is the route an Arab tribe would still follow; because in the desert there is little pasture for flocks, and no water. Haran still retains its ancient name, and some relics of former greatness. It is now a small and poor village standing on the bank of a small river called Belik, which flows into the Euphrates about 50 miles to the southward. P.]

REFLECTIONS .- How awful the presumption of sinners, who dare attempt to withstand the known command and purpose of the Almighty! Deeply should it affect us that we find the serpent's seed so harmonious and active in wickedness, while the children of promise are so divided and inactive in holiness. But with equity and ease the Lord frustrates the devices of numerous, a multitude which no man can number, Ps. from him, and all the families of the earth. | Terah, who set out for Canaan, died by the way, let me | and prosper the friends of Abram and his natural seed, tremble, lest, a promise being left me of entering into God's rest, I should seem to come short of it !-tremble lest I should be almost, but never altogether, a Christian, not far from the kingdom of God, but never a true member thereof here, or partaker of it hereafter!

CHAPTER XII. Ver. I. While Abram was in Ur of the Chaldees, God appeared to him, probably in human shape, Ac. 7. 2, as he did at least eight times afterwards, Ge. 12. 6, 7; \quad 3, 4; \quad 15. 1; \quad 17. 1; \quad 18. 1; \quad 21. 12; \quad 22. 1, 15, and called him to leave his country and his father's house, which for some time past had been infected with idolatry, Jos. 24. 2; 2 Co. 6. 17; Re. 18. 4; Is. 41. 2; Ne. 9. 7. He readily surrendering all for the sake of Christ, Ps. 45. 11; Lu. 14. 26, in obedience to the divine command, and relying on his direction and protection, went forth, not knowing whither the Lord intended to lead him, He. 11. 8. But as they had stopped too long in Haran, I suppose the call here mentioned was one which he received anew after the death of his father.

Ver. 2. Abraham was made a great nation. His posterity by Ishmael, by the sons of Keturah, and by Esau, were exceedingly numerous, ch. 16. 10; 17. 20; 21. 13; 25. 1-18; xxxvi.; Nn. xxxi.; Jn. vi. vii. His seed of promise, by Jacob, were as the stars of heaven and the dust of the earth in multitude, ch. 13.16; 15.5; and the dust of the earth in multitude, cn. 13. 10; 15. 5; and also great faith—he knew not where he was going. 22.17; 28. 3, 14; 32. 12; Nn. i.; 23. 10; He. 11. 12; 1 Ch. xxi.; 1 Ki. 4. 20; 2 Ch. xxii.; Je. 33. 22. His spiritual seed, followers of his faith and obedience, are still more and honoured him, the whole nation that was to spring but especially of Jesus Christ and his spiritual seed; and did and will remarkably punish their enemies, Jos. 2. 9; Ge. 15. 13, 14; Ex. 17. 8-16; Mat. 10. 42; 25. 41-46. All the families of the earth are blessed in Abram. He was of great service to the Canaanites, in imparting revelation to some of them, or in setting before them all an engaging example of virtue. His seed of promise, and especially his spiritual seed, are useful on that account, and have been and are still the means of the prosperity or protection of nations, Is. 6. 13; 19. 24, 25; Mat. 24. 22. But it is properly in his seed (Christ) that men are blessed. Multitudes of nations receive much outward happiness, and the dispensation of gos-pel ordinances, in consequence of his undertaking for his people, Mat. 24. 24; Is. xxxv. xlix. lx.; 6. 13. And believers, gathered out of all nations, are blessed in him with temporal, spiritual, and eternal blessings, Ga. 3. 16; Ac. 3. 25, 26; Ep. 1. 3; Ps. 72. 17–19; Is. 45. 17-25. It is easy to see, that the subsequent promises and threatenings, nay, the doctrines and laws, mentioned in Scripture, are but an enlarged exposition of these two verses; and the whole fate of the Jewish and gospel church, nay, of the saints in heaven and lost in hell, are but one continued fulfilment thereof.

Ver. 3. [The command given to Abraham involved great personal sacrifices-country, kindred, and home; and also great faith—he knew not where he was going.

THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT—A MONUMENT ABRAHAM SAW. [Genesis, xii:11.]—When Abraham made his first visit to Egypt, 1921 B. C., the Great Pyramid, according to the estimate of Wallis Budge, Assistant Keeper of the Department of Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities, British Museum, had been standing 1,812 years; so while we look at the Great Pyramid to-day, we may know at least that we are beholding one monument seen by Abraham. This pyramid was built by Cheops as his tomb. This is the largest of all the pyramids; covers about thirteen acres of land, and in the center of it is what is called the King's Chamber, where Cheops was buried. It is the first object that meets the eye when approaching Cairo, and is one of the monuments that the traveler never forgets. There is enough stone, it is said, in this great pyramid to build a wall all around the frontiers of France. Much of this material has been used in the building of modern Cairo.

ETHEL—WHERE ABRAHAM WENT WITH LOT AND HIS WIFE. [Genesis, xiii:3.]—When Abraham went up out of Egypt with Lot and his wife, his cattle, his silver, and his gold, he went on his journey from the South, even to Bethel, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Bethel and Ai. In the picture we have a view of Bethel as it is to-day. It is twelve miles from Jerusalem, and is a place where tourists take lunch the first day out from the Holy City. It is a desolate looking place, and the ruins of the ancient city are about three or four acres in extent. These consist of foundations, fragments of walls, and large heaps of stone. In the picture we are looking toward the northeast. South of the village there is a great reservoir. Every stone and ruin about this old place speaks of the past. Bethel means "The House of God." Hence so many churches all over the world have been called Bethel.

[Genesis, xiii:10.]—"And Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain of Jorand Gomorrah." In the above picture we have a view of a Bedouin village as it appears to-day, that stands in the very plain of Jordan that Lot saw well watered everywhere. The waters from Elisha's Fountain, that have always been used to irri gate this plain, pass through this village. It would be hard to conceive of a village with a more tumbled-down, wretched appearance than this, and the people who live in the village are as degenerate looking and degraded as one would judge them to be from their place of abode. The full force and meaning of Abram's words can only be seen by considering his position in connection with the promise originally given to him. He was not only childless, but to all human appearance hopelessly so. God had promised him that his seed should be as the stars of heaven for multitude. As yet there was no sign, and as he thought, no hope of its fulfilment. Consequently when the Lord now says, 'I am thy shield, &c., Abraham replies in the bitterness of hope-lessness, 'What wilt thou give me?' What can make up for the want of a child?' 'The heir of my house is this Damascus-Eliezer'-my slave must be my heir. Abram's complaint just amounts to this: All gifts and promises are nothing to me since a child is withheld. P.]

RIDGE AT DAMASCUS—"IN THE OLDEST CITY OF THE WORLD." [GENESIS, xv: 2.]—"And Abram said, Lord God, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?" In this second verse of the 15th chapter of Genesis, Damascus is mentioned for the first time in the Bible. Thus we see that two thousand years before Christ, this city was known to Abraham, Father of the Faithful. Because of this Damascus has enjoyed the honor

throughout the ages of being regarded as the oldest city in the world. In Damascus the peculiar manners and character of the orientals are seen to perfection. Here we have the houses built around an open court, which is planted with trees, with a trickling fountain in the center. Here are bazaars, coffee houses, goldsmiths and silversmiths and manufacturers of sword blades. About a quarter of a mile from the eastern gate of the city a spot is pointed out as the scene of the conversion of Saint Paul.

Before they call, he answers; and whilst they are yet speaking, he saith, Here I am. Scarcely will he do anything important without revealing his secrets to them. How he condescends to our weakness, in giving us signs in ordinances, signs in providence, for the confirmation of our faith in his promises! All along they have been a nuisance and plague to the nations around them; infamous for theft, robbery, revenge, pillage, and murder. CHAPTER XVII.

1 God reneweth the covenant. 5 Abram's name is changed, in token of greater blessings. 9 Circumcision is instituted. 15 Sarai's name is changed, and she blessed. 17 Isaac is promised. 23 Abraham and Ishmael are circumcised.

dishonour, attempted to subdue them. Flushed with | a state of uninterrupted hostility with all men; seeking his eastern victories, Pompey, the famed Roman general, when they had hopes of gaining their purpose, these wild Arabs pursued them, almost at their heels, and dreadfully harassed the Roman subjects in Syria. Augustus, the renowned emperor, made one or more fruitless attempts to subdue them. About A.D. 110, Trajan, one of the most powerful emperors and valiant generals that ever filled the Roman throne, with a mighty army, determined if possible to subdue them, and laid siege to their capital. But storms of hail, which are scarcely ever seen in that country, thunder, lightning, whirl-wind, swarms of flies, and dreadful apparitions in the air, terrified or repulsed his troops as often as they repeated their attacks. About eighty years after, Severus, another warlike emperor, determined to punish their siding with Niger, his rival, by an utter reduction of them. But, after he had made a breach on the wall of their principal city, an unaccountable difference between him and his beloved and faithful European troops obliged him to raise the siege, and leave the country. In the seventh century of the Christian era, these Ishmaelites, under Mahomet, their famed impostor, and his successors, furiously extended their empire, and their new and false religion, through a great part of Asia and Africa, and even some countries of Europe, Re. 9. 1-11. Since the fall of their empire, the Turks have made repeated attempts to subdue them; but instead of succeeding, they have been obliged, for near three hundred years past, to pay them to conceal their guilt. An uneasiness of temper, and a yearly tribute of forty thousand crowns, for procuring a safe passage for their pilgrims to Mecca, the holy city, where Mahomet was born. If, to fulfil his promise, God hath done so much for protecting the temporal liberty of miscreants, what will he not do for the salvation of his people! [Ver. 12. The 'wild ass' (pere, the Hebrew word here translated 'wild') was the emblem of wild, rude, uncontrollable freedom-total disregard of law and social restraint, Job 24. 5; 11. 12. Such has ever been, and is still, the character of the Arab. He roams free through his native desert. No power has been able to control his movements, or to induce or compel him to adopt the settled habits of induce or compel him to adopt the settled habits of and honourable accomplishment in the season which civilized life. His hand has been, and is, against every he thinks fit. And if he grant me undeserved visits, man who, without his protection, enters his country; while the yoke of my transgressions is wreathed about and the hand of every surrounding ruler has been and is against him. Yet he dwells to this day, as he has done for nearly forty centuries, in the pre-

no home but the desert, submitting to no law but their attempted to reduce them; but his army being recalled will, and acknowledging no right but their sword; 'their hand against every man, and every man's hand against them. — And he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren. To ascertain the meaning of this phrase, we must recollect that one peculiarity in the prophecies concerning the Jews-another branch of the Abrahamic tree—was, De. 28. 64, 'And the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other.' Now this was foretold of the child of the promise, the descendants of Isaac; but of Ishmael, the son of the bond-woman, it is said, He shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren; that is, while Israel shall be scattered, dispersed, and outcast, Is. 11. 12, from the land promised to Abram, Ishmael shall abide in the land promised to Hagar. The event has verified the prediction, and proved that it proceeded from him who 'determined the bounds of their habitation.' Israel is scattered in judgment as chaff of the thrashing-floor; Ishmael abides immovable as Sinai, C.]

Ver. 13. Have I, in this desert as well as in my master's family, and notwithstanding my misbehaviour, received a gracious visit from God, as my powerful guardian and kind benefacter and have I duly considered, and thanked him for, and improved the same?

REFLECTIONS. — The best of snints too often degrade themselves to obtain what they desire before God's time, and with some plausible pretexts endeavour too much affection to creatures, often induce us to comply with their sinful proposals. But the best intended transgressions will quickly issue in shame and trouble to the guilty, especially if saints; while our tempters prove our first and principal accusers. How transcendent the mercy of God, in visiting transgressors in the very troubles which they had drawn upon their own heads! Yet remember no happy deliverance is to be expected but in the way of returning to our duty. Let me never therefore hope for comfort in children, or in anything besides, but in the Lord's way. Let me always leave it to him to give his promise a proper my neck, let me with wonder remark his kindness, and

God. This is the first time Jehovah calls himself Almighty; or, as some render it, and the word will bear, All-sufficient. It is important to remark, that God, whose perfections are infinite, can never, in the language of a finite being, fully bring out the catalogue of his attributes. But, on all occasions, he puts forth that special view of his perfections which is best calculated, in his special circumstances, to be the pillar of the believer's faith. Abram was a stranger, and surrounded by enemies, God therefore declares himself the Almighty, able to protect him in all dangers, as well as to fulfil all his promises. C.—El-Shaddai, 'God-Almighty,' was the name by which the Lord announced himself or made himself formally known to Abram and to the early patriarchs. It indicated the special relationship in which he stood to them:-he was their omnipotent Protector and Provider in a strange land. P.

Ver. 2. God's making a covenant here, and in many other places, denotes the enlargement, renewal, establishment, or confirmation of it. It cannot be imagined that, in the various instances in which this phrase is used, he had not respect to his former declarations of the same kind as still in force, Ps. 105. 8-10; Ge. 15. 18; Ex. 34. 10-27; 1 Ki. 8. 9; Je. 31. 33; Ho. 2. 18; Ge. 6. 18; ver. 7, 19, 21; Ex. 6. 4; Le. 27. 9; De. 8. 18; Eze. 16. 60, 62.

But, as it respects Christ, and believers in him, it implies God's interesting them, in all his persons and perfections, by every amiable relation, and his giving them all that he hath, and doing all his works, for their happiness and comfort, Ps. 89. 27; Ep. 1. 3; He. 8. 10; Ps. 144. 15; 16. 5, 6. This covenant, as it respected the Hebrew nation, together with the possession of Canaan, and the various ceremonial ordinances by which they were marked the peculiar people of God, and in the observance of which they were to enjoy their rest and prosperity in Canaan, is represented as everlasting or for ever: but in these passages no more than a long time is meant, ch. 48. 4; Ex. 12. 14; 21. 6; 31. 17; 32. 13; 40. 15; Le. 16. 34; 25. 23, 30, 46; Nu. 10. 8; 15. 15; 18. 19; 25. 13; De. 4. 40; 15. 17; 18. 5; Jos. 4. 7; 14. 9, &c. sanctification of their nature and life, Ro. 4. 11; Ex. 19. 5, 6; De. 10. 15; 30. 6; Col. 2. 11. On the part of the persons circumcised, it imported their acceptance of God in Christ as their God, and of redemption through the blood of his Son; and their engagement to have no longer intimate friendship with the world which lieth in wickedness, but to mortify their lusts, and to apply themselves to the most internal and spiritual piety, Phi. 3. 3; Je. 4. 4; Ro. 2. 29. Females were considered as represented in the males, with respect to this ordinance. But children were not to be circumcised till the eighth day; to teach us that neither circumcision nor baptism is absolutely necessary to salvation, and because till that time children and other animals were reckoned too weak or impure for dedication to God,

[Genesis, xix:29.]—"And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in which Lot dwelt." The cities of the plain are supposed to have been Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, and they were situated in the midst of the garden-like plain that lies between the Moab mountains and the Judean Mountains, just to the north of the Dead Sea. A shower of brimstone and fire fell upon these cities, we are told in the nineteenth chapter of Genesis, and destroyed them. The sites, especially of Sodom and Gomorrah, are now supposed to be under the waters of the Dead Sea at the upper and northern end of it. This part of the sea is represented in the view given above. The awful doom of Sodom and Gomorrah is held up in numerous passages in the Old and New Testament as warnings, as Mark, vi:11; II. Peter, ii:6; Jude i:7.

THE ROCK IN THE TEMPLE—WHERE ABRAHAM IS SAID TO HAVE STARTED TO SACRIFICE ISAAC. [GENESIS, xxii: 3.]—"And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him." This Rock in the Temple is now inclosed by the Mosque of Omar. It is claimed that upon this rock Abraham prepared to slay his son at God's command, and here in later days David built his altar upon the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite, where the angel of the pestilence stayed his hand. Here stood the first temple in which Jehovah dwelt. It was at this place that God said, "Here will I dwell, for I have desired it." And in the sacrificial victims which for hundreds of years were offered on this spot, there was remembrance made of the promise of a nobler sacrifice which could alone procure the remission of sins.

3 ¶ And Abraham arose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt-offering, and and clave the wood for the burnt-offering, and best up, and ewent unto the place of which God and told him.

cost when we enter upon a religious life! for who knows how many and how great our trials in it may be, since trials are increased in proportion to men's faith and spiritual comfort. Those trials are most afflicting to the believer which not only fly in the face of natural affection, or of outward honour and pleasure, but even threaten to frustrate the promises of God; yet thrice happy are they who, under the sorest trials, heartily acquiesce in the will of God, and firmly cleave to his promise, who, though he slay them, yet will still trust in him! For often when the nights of trial are at the very darkest, the Lord steps in, compasseth them about with songs of deliverance, and blesseth with all spiritual

ND there was a famine in the land, besides A the afirst famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went bunto Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar.9

2 And the Lord cappeared unto him, and said, Go not down dinto Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of.

3 Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee: for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries: and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father:1

4 And I swill make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

5 Because that Abraham obeyed my voice. and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

6 ¶ And Isaac dwelt in Gerar.

7 And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and he said, She is my sister:2 for he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah, because she was fair to look upon.

8 And it came to pass, when he had been womb presaged that they and their posterity would live at variance one with another, and exceedingly differ in their religion, laws, manners, &c. The Edomites, descended from Esan, were at first the strongest people, ch. xxxvi.; but the Israelites, sprung from Jacob, under David (2 Sa. 8. 14), nnder Amaziah (2 Ch. 25. 11, 12), and under Hyrcanus, subdued them. Nay, Jacob's obtaining the birthright and blessing, ver. 29-34; 27. 29, 37, 40, rendered him and his posterity superior to Esan and his Edomite seed.

Ver. 27. Esau was a wild, savage kind of man, spending most of his time in hunting, learning the art of war, and the like, ch. 10. 9; 16. 12. Jacob was a sincere, mild, plain-dealing man, keeping much at his home, attending to his hornelabil afficient and the like home, attending to his household affairs, and to his father's flocks and herds, ch. 6. 9; 46. 34.—[And the boys grew. REFLECTIONS.—Before I part with Abraham, this celebrated patriarch, let me, in him, contemplate Jesus the everlasting Father. How astonishing his meekness-his kindness to men-his intimacy with, fear of, obedience to, and trust in his God! He is the chosen favourite of JEHOVAH—the father and covenanthead of innumerable millions of saved men. To him all the promises relative to the evangelical and eternal state of his church were originally made. All obedient at his Father's call, he left his native abodes of bliss, and became 'a stranger and sojourner on earth,' not having where to lay his head. At his Father's call, he offered himself an acceptable sacrifice to God; by his all-prevalent intercession, and supernatural influence, he offers men salvation from sin and from the hand of their enemies; and, after long patience, he wins untold disciples in the lew

Ver. 30. The name Edom, signifying red, at once | sight; while wicked families are loaded with temporal mercies for the sake of their pious progenitors. Promised events are often ushered in by the most dis-couraging appearances; and mercies must be long prayed and waited for ere they be granted. It is good when husbands and wives unite their supplications; for to spread our griefs before a throne of grace is the greatest and surest relief. How often much trouble and vexation attend what is too eagerly desired! But how tender is God, in fixing the temporal, and even eternal, states of persons according to their faith! And how early are children known by their doings! yet in their education great care is to be taken in consulting their tempers and dispositions. Parents frequently expose themselves to future troubles by their partial regard to children. But why should we set our hearts on them, or any other worldly comfort, when we must so quickly leave them by death? At that time it should be the concern of parents so to dispose of their effects, that there may be no disputes after they are gone; and such deserve to have most assigned them as are likely to make the best use of it. How often the wisest worldlings act the most foolish part, while 'the Lord preserveth the simple!' How marvellously God overruleth even the sins of men, to the accomplishment of his purpose or promise, and the advancement of his glory! How dreadful, when men, even those who have had a religious education, gratify their sensual appetites at the expense of the temporal and eternal rnin of themselves and their seed; and when God permits them to be afterwards hardened in their sin, and

NTRANCE TO THE GARDEN OF THE VIRGIN—WHERE JOSEPH LIVED. [GEN. xxvi: 2.]—When Herod issued his cruel decree that all the children in Bethlehem under two years of age should be put to death, the Lord appeared unto Joseph in a dream and said, Arise, take the young child and his mother and flee into Egypt. There is a tradition of long standing that the place of the sojourn in Egypt was at Matariyeh. It was near this place that Joseph lived, because it is only a short distance from Heliopolis where Pottpherah resided, whose daughter Joseph married. This is a few miles east of Cairo, and the village is connected with it by telegraph and telephone. The region about Matariyeh is very fertile. Cotton grows here; orange groves are near by, and only a short distance is an ostrich farm kept by a Frenchman. It is a beautiful road from Cairo out to this place.

[GENESIS, xxvi:3,4.]—'Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father.'' Nearly four thousand years from the time these words were spoken to Abraham, we find a village as shown above, built by the Rothschilds, descendants of Abraham, in Palestine, the country that was promised to Abraham, and built as a place of residence for the Jews It is a striking and interesting commentary upon the covenant between Heaven and these ancient people, that we find in these the last days of the nineteenth century, a disposition on the part of the Jews, which liberal and fortunate men of their race are helping them to carry out, to go back and possess the land of their fathers. UR TENT NEAR BETHEL—WHERE JACOB SAW THE LADDER AND THE ANGELS. [Genesis, xxviii:12.]—This is supposed to be the place where Jacob tarried all the night and where he dreamed and "behold a ladder set up upon the earth with its top reaching to heaven, and where the angels of God ascended and descended upon it."

The bed was earth, the raised pillow stones,
Whereon poor Jacob rests his head, his bones,
Heaven was his canopy, the shades of night
Were his drawn curtains to exclude the light.

Who would not sleep on such a bed,
With stony pillow for his head,
If they might dream with thee,
Whose glad dreaming is no seeming,
Nor whose sleeping ends in weeping,
And whose waking is no breaking
Of the bright reality.

Bethel is on the road from Jerusalem, and along this way our Savior often walked.

"And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand and all their earrings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under the oak which was by Shechem." Nablous is the modern name of Shechem. It is now a thrifty, well kept Eastern city with a population of about 20,000, of which 160 are Samaritans, 600 are Christians, 200 are Jews, and the rest Mohammedans. The principal structures of the city are mosques. The only Samaritans in the world live here near their sacred mountain, where they continue to worship as they did when the woman of Samaria talked with our Savior at Jacob's well. There is a Samaritan synagogue here, where is kept what is said to be the oldest copy of the Bible in the world. The whole country in the neighborhood of Shechem or Nablous is historic.

ND Jacob dwelt in the land wherein his  $oldsymbol{A}$  father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan.

2 These are bethe generations of Jacob. Joseph, being seventeen years old,5 was feeding the flock with his brethren; and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's 'wives: and Joseph brought unto his father their6 evil report.7

3 Now Israel doved Joseph more than all his children, because he was the son of his old age: and he made him a coat of many colours.

4 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, 9they hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

5 ¶ And Joseph hdreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren; and they hated him vet

6 And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed:

7 For, behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and, lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, your *sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

8 And his brethren said to him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

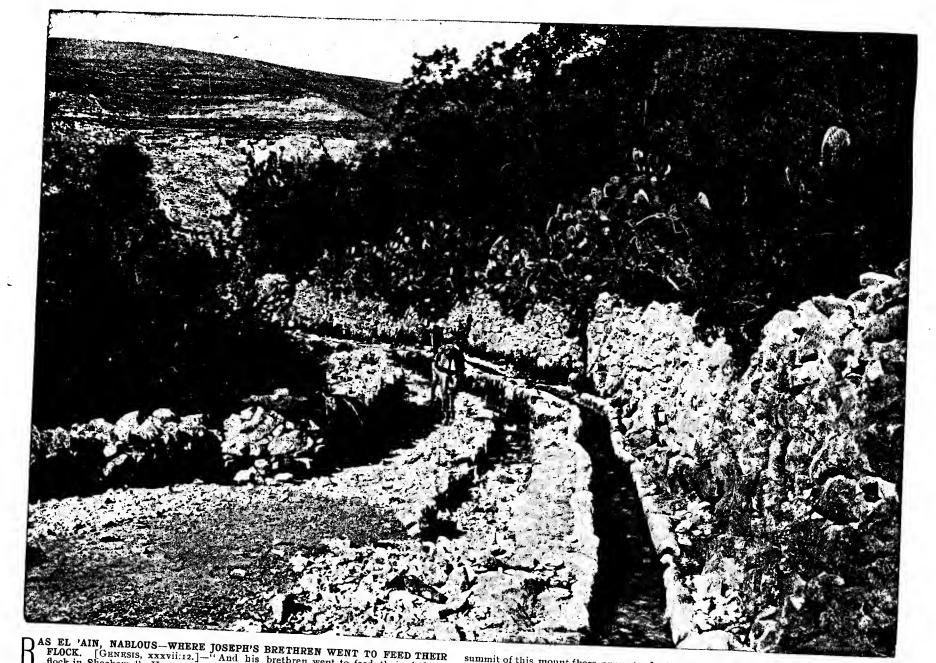

9  $\P$  And he "dreamed yet another dream, and told it his bretbren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more; "and, behold, the sun, and the moon, and the eleven stars, made obeisance to me.

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked<sup>9</sup> him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I, and thy mother, and thy brethren, indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

11 And his brethren envied him; but his father pobserved the saying.

12 ¶ And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in <sup>q</sup>Shechem.

13 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem? come, and I will send thee unto them. And the said to him, Here am I.

AS EL 'AIN, NABLOUS—WHERE JOSEPH'S BRETHREN WENT TO FEED THEIR FLOCK. [Genesis, xxxvii:12.]—"And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem." Here we have another view in Shechem. We see a stream flowing down in a small channel cut for it from the foot of Gerizim. The springs of Gerizim make the valley of Shechem the most heautiful and fruitful of Central Palestine. We see sloping up toward the left of the picture the sides of Mount Gerizim. Upon the summit of this mount there once stood a temple built by the Samaritans, when the Jews returned from captivity and would not allow them to help rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem because they had become a mixed race. Across the valley from Mount Gerizim is Mount Ebal. Between these two mountains Jesus often passed as he history of Palestine. Shechem is the oldest city connected with the

them in Dothan." And when his brethren saw him coming, they said: Come, therefore, and let us slay him and cast him into some pit.

We see the flocks still feeding on the hills of Dothan, and the young shepherd we see watching them has on his coat of many colors, very much like that which excited the envy of Joseph's brethren. The hillside is still dotted, it is said, with rock-cut bottle-shaped cisterns, and it was in one of these that Joseph was thrown by his brethren.

So he sent him out of the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem.<sup>1</sup>

15 And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field: and the man asked him saying. What seekest thou?

18 sood about fifty miles northward fifty miles man asked him, saying, What seekest thou?

16 And he said, I seek my brethren: tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

17 And the man said, They are departed hence: for I heard them say, Let us go to Dothan.<sup>t</sup> And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan.2

18 ¶ And when they saw him afar off,3 even before he came near unto them, "they conspired against him to slay him.

19 And they said one to another, Behold, this dreamer4 cometh!

20 Come<sup>z</sup> now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Somey evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

25 And they sat down to eat bread. and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of Ishmeelites came from Gilead, with their camels bearing spicery, and balm, and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

26 And Judah said unto his brethren, What profit is it if we slay our brother, and conceal his blood?

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an levil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces.

34 And Jacob rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.

ENCE AT DOTHAN—WHERE JOSEPH'S BRETHREN SOLD HIM TO THE ISHMAELITEISH MERCHANTS. [Genesis, xxxvii:25]—The thorny cactus everywhere abounds in Palestine, and is used by the natives for the purpose of making fences. One of the tallest of these cactus fences we saw at Dothan. In agreement with the narrative in Genesis, it is remarkable to find that the great highway from Gibeon to Egypt still passes near Dothan. It was along this road, beside which stands this cactus fence, that the Ishmaelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spices and balm and myrrh, going to carry them down to Egypt, to whom Joseph was sold by his brethren; and it is said that modern Ishmaelites passing in the same way would not hesitate to make such a purchase now. The plains about Dothan have been used for pasturing sheep in all ages. Here the nomadic shepherd still reigns, while the higher lands are held by a settled population. Elisha resided at Dothan.

OFFEE HOUSE IN THE GARDEN OF THE VIRGIN AT MATARIYEH—WHERE JOSEPH LIVED. [GENESIS, xxxix:1.]—"And Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmaelites which had bronght him down thither." We give this picture of a coffee house in the garden of The Virgin, because Matariyeh is only about a half mile from the site of the Temple of the Sun which stood in Heliopolis. It was a priest of this temple whose daughter Joseph married, and it was doubtless in this place that Joseph lived and met his father when he came down from Canaan under the exigency of famine to live in Egypt. This coffee house is for the accommodation of tourists who come out from Cairo to visit Matariyeh because of its connection with the sojourn of Joseph and Mary, and with the history of Joseph the son of Jacob in Egypt.

CHAPTER XLII.

1 Jacob sendeth his ten sons to buy corn in Egypt. 6 They are imprisoned by Joseph for spies, but set at liberty on condition to bring Benjamin. 21 They have remorse for Joseph. 24 Simeon is kept for a pledge. 25 They return with corn, and their money. 29 Their relation to Jacob. 35 He is afraid, and refuseth to send Benjamin.

2 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt; get you bdown thither, and buy for us from thence, that we may live, and not die.

3 And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren: for he said, Lest peradventure mischief befall him.

5 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: for the famine was in the land of Canaan.

6  $\P$  And Joseph was the governor over the land, and he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth.

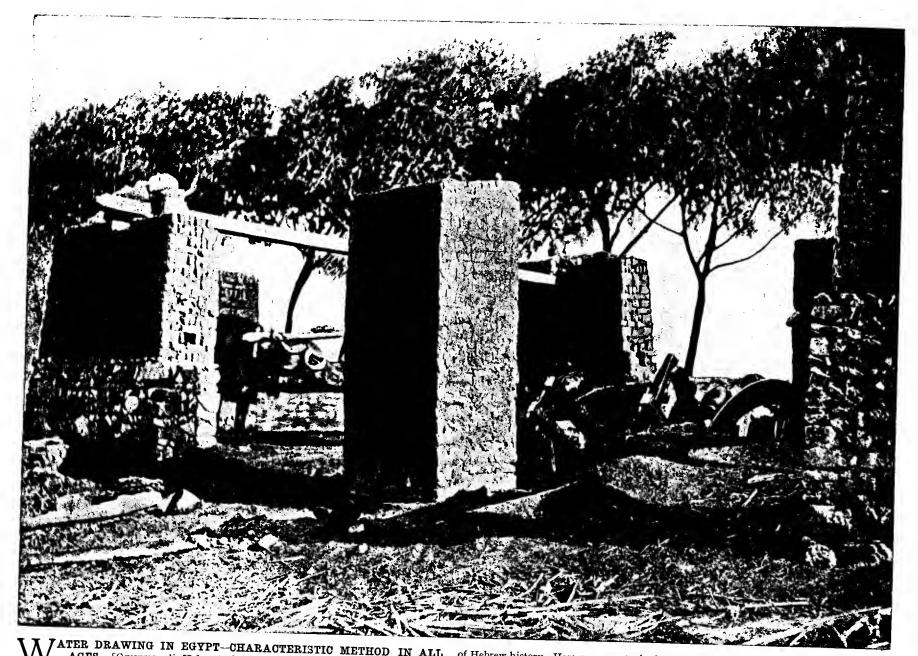

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

RAIN BOATS ON THE NILE - SHOWING HOW CORN HAS ALWAYS BEEN BROUGHT DOWN FROM UPPER EGYPT. [Genesis, xli:49.]—"And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number." These grain boats we see on the Nile bring down from Upper Egypt every year the same kind of corn that Joseph gathered together during the seven years of plenty, against the seven years of famine. In our country this is called wheat. In the Bible it is called corn. The wheat is loaded in these boats without being sacked, poured into the frame work or body of them, and after the boats reach their destination at Cairo, the wheat is sacked and carried upon the shore, whence it is shipped to different countries. The place where these hoats land is about a mile above Cairo, near the island of Rhoda, and near the Nilometer. Standing here we are very near the reputed place where Moses was discovered in the Nile by the daughter of Pharaoh.

ATER DRAWING IN EGYPT—CHARACTERISTIC METHOD IN ALL AGES. [Genesis, xli: 57.]—"And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn, because that the famine was so sore in all lands." It is very appropriate, therefore, that the accompanying picture represents a scene near the village of Matariyeh where Joseph lived. Here came Abraham with his wife Sarah at the very dawn of Hebrew history. Here many centuries later Joseph and the Virgin Mother found rest and shelter, and here after the crucifixion and resurrection came the messengers of the Gospel to preach peace on earth. This is a water-drawing scene characteristic of Egypt in all ages, helping us to see how from the Nile people have been able to irrigate their soil and thus secure abundant crops while famines came often to other lands.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, my lord; but to buy food are thy servants come.

PRING OF THE VIRGIN—WHERE JOSEPH MET JACOB. [Genesis, xlvi:29, 30.]—
"And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel, his father, and presented himself unto him; and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while. And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive." We give the view of the Spring of the Virgin because it is in the neighborhood where Joseph lived and where his father met him. The water in this region is such as has percolated through the soil from the Nile. Eber says that this spring is mentioned in records of the highest antiquity. It was believed for centuries that the balsam shrub could thrive here and nowhere else. This spot has come to be dear to the human race because the holy family sojourned here during their stay in Egypt, and because of its connection with Moses and Joseph.

Difficult is the work of quieting a guilty conscience, if thoroughly awakened: but it were hard-hearted, indeed, to refuse forgiveness of injuries, especially when requested by such as are at once our brethren and the servants of the God of our fathers. And when penitential confessions of injury done meet with a ready forgiveness from the receiver, it is highly ornamental and becoming; at the same time it is necessary for offenders principally to deal with God himself, through the blood of his Son. But to finish a religious life in the vigorous exercises of faith on God's promises, and in high friendship with

EXODUS,

Contains a history of one hundred and forty-five years, and therein exhibits the fulfilment of God's promises to the patriarchs, in the multiplication of their seed, and their deliverance from bondage in Egypt; and represents the establishment of those laws and ordinances which God required them to observe as memorials of his favours. We have here particularly represented the tyranny of Pharaoh king of Egypt; the cruel bondage and marvellous increase of the Israelites; the hirth, education, and exile of Moses; his and his brother Aaron's divine mission to deliver their brethren; the ten plagues inflicted on the Egyptians for refusing to let the Israelites leave their country, and their destruction in the Red Sea; the Hebrews' celebration of the passover, departure from Egypt, and safe passage through the Red Ses; God's sustenance of them by sweetened water, or water from a flinty rock, and by quails and bread from heaven; his laws relative to the passover, feast of unlesvened bread, firstlings, manns, &c.; his solemn publication of his moral law from Mount Sinai; his directions relative to their civil and religious conduct; his entrance into covenant with them, ch. i.-xxiv.; his directions concerning the tabernacle and its furniture, and concerning the apparel and consecration of his priests; the Hebrews' idolatrous making and worshipping the golden calf; Moses' intercession for them, and God's gracious reconcilement by means of it; their voluntary contribution for, and actual making and erecting, the tabernacle and its whole furniture, ch. xxv.-xl. There are, perhaps, more types of Christ in this than in any other book in the Bible.

OAD TO THE PYRAMIDS. [Exodus, 1:8.]—"Now there arose up a new king over Egypt which knew not Joseph." We give a beautiful picture above illustrating a scene in Egypt just across the River Nile at the turn of the road, as we pass from Cairo to the Pyramids. One meets here in the early morning market folk coming tree or country with donkeys laden with all kinds of vegetables; camels bearing fresh loads of clover, and expecting from the sale of these to take back in the afternoon such necessaries from the stores as they need. This is a macadamized road lined on either side by acacia trees. This picture was taken by our artist instantaneously, hence the people appear to be in motion. This scene is about a mile out from Cairo and about eight miles from the Pyramids, though the Pyramids were in sight even at this point.

away, and another comes. Those who wax great or numerous should therefore remember their original meanness. Remarkable is the birth of God's promise when its full time comes. In two hundred and fifteen years Abraham's promised seed had increased to seventy persons: in as many more they are increased to about three millions. Services done to men are soon forgotten, but those done to God are had in everlasting remembrance. At the same time, God's kindness often sharpens men's cruelty. And to what horrid and savage barbarity their selfish designs often push them! But it is vain for devils or men to contend with the Lord. Their hest-laid attempts against his designs will but promote their accomplishment: and God's church often thrives best in the fiery furnace of troubles, continued one after another. AST FROM THE PYRAMIDS OF GIZEH—A SCENE IN THE LAND WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL SPENT 430 YEARS. [Exodus, iv:19.]—"And the Lord said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life." To understand men we must study the land in which they grew up. The relation of Moses to the children of Israel, to the Exodus, and the civilization which the Hebrew people developed, was such that we cannot do better than consider him through Egypt, in which he spent the first forty years of his life. The fortunes of Israel were committed to the keeping almost wholly of Moses. Hence we shall illustrate his career by pictures of Egypt. Standing at the pyramids and looking east, we see the direction the children of Israel took when they left the land in which they had sojourned four hundred and thirty years. We see the back of the Sphinx, and in the distance in dim outline, trees which skirt the banks of the Nile.

REFLECTIONS.—Let me, with holy awe, observe, that God intends the judgments which he executes as standing memorials of his supreme power and authority over all creatures, and of his victorious power over the kingdom of Satan, in restraining the malice and chastising the insolence of his and his people's enemies. But there is nothing for which God more readily quarrels with men than for their pride. Whole nations are often ruined through the pride and obstinacy of their governors: and when Satan has got sinners godly from among them; for if once a full separation be made, the former will be irrecoverably and inexpressibly miserable, and the just judgment of God will no longer tarry.

REFLECTIONS.-Come near, my soul, and behold what the Lord hath wrought for Israel! He had multiplied them amidst cruel bondage and murder; he had protected them amidst ruinous plagues: and now, after a solemn feast, he brings them forth with wealth, with honour, in health, in peace, in order, and in due riches, and righteousness, they come forth! In what high honour, spiritual soundness, peace, and order, they are brought from heathenism or Popery; nay, from their natural state of bondage and death in trespasses and sins; and all in the precise time of love, the day of espousals, the hour of grace, appointed of the Father! And how marvellously JEHOVAH here makes all things new. A new thing is created on the earth -a virgin brings forth a child whose name is 1M-MANUEL, God with us! A new testament is ratified in his blood! a new covenant is confirmed with many! a new gospel period, a year of God's redeemed, is introduced! new festivals on the flesh and blood of his Son! new liberties! freedom indeed, for those who are made heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ! a new time! Behold what things he who sitteth on the church of Jews and Gentiles, purified by his oblation.

and death, for us; -- and might, with unfeigned faith, sincere love, and bitter grief for sin, be fed upon by us, in holy fellowship, as the sweet, the heart-cheering, supporting, and strengthening food of our soul, by which we are enabled to go up from this evil world towards our everlasting inheritance in the Canaan above! And, blessed be the Lord, we, strangers and foreigners, sinners of the Gentiles, are admitted to feast on him, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of God, while the Jewish children of the kingdom reject him! In their feast of unleavened bread may 1 not discern Jesus' state of debasement on earth? his week fulfilled in holiness, in sorrows, and in sufferings; on the first day of which he assumed his holy manhood, was gathered with sinners, but without sin; and on the last of which he made his life a ransom for all?

So we have pointed out to us to-day the tomb of Joseph about a mile and a half south of Shechem, on the parcel of ground purchased by Jacob. It stands at the eastern entrance to the valley between Mount Gerizin and Mount Ebal. Jews, Samaritans, Christians and Mohammedans agree on the identity of this sacred place. The tomb is about six feet long, four feet high, covered with ordinary plaster, as are the Moslem graves of the country. It is about a mile from Jacob's well. 1 God instructeth the Israelites in their journey. 5 Pharaoh pursueth after them. 10 The Israelites murmur. 13 Moses comforteth them. 15 God instructeth Moses. 19 The cloud removeth behind the camp. 21 The Israelites pass through the Red Sea, 23 which drowneth the Egyptians.

3 For Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

4 And I will harden Pharaoh's heart,8 that he shall follow after them; and I will be honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; that the Egyptians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

5 ¶ And it was told the king of Egypt that the people fled: and the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him.

7 And he took six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over every one of them.

8 And the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and the children of Israel went out 'with an high hand.

TOMBS OF THE CALIPHS—DESCENDANTS OF THE ANCIENT PHARAOHS. [Exodus, xiv:23.]—Here we have a view of the Tombs of the Caliphs, built in the time of the Mameluke princes. These tombs extend along the east side of the city of Cairo. Each formerly had an endowment and a staff of sheiks and attendants who lived near them. About the beginning of the present century the properties belonging to these tombs were confiscated, while the families who made their means of subsistence attending to them were left without employment. This picture helps us to see the tombs, as they look in modern times, of the Caliphs, who, in the respect that they were rulers in Egypt for a time, were the descendants of the ancient Pharaohs. These tombs are now falling into decay, and the attendants who once kept them continue to live among their ruins and beg travelers for backsheesh.

they should inquire after, and rejoice in, one another's | welfare. It is necessary that, if married persons part for a time, they should meet again with the first conveniency, that they may share in one another's honours and comforts, as well as in their troubles; and that children should be, as much as possible, under the immediate inspection of religious parents. When great honours from God are attended with due humility towards men; and when such as have seen much of the Lord's goodness readily communicate their experiences to their friends, especially when meeting together they chiefly converse concerning the things of God, and sanctify their mutual friendship with joint prayer and praise, it is both pleasing and instructive.

NGLISH ORPHANAGE, NAZARETH—AN INSTITUTION EXPRESSING CHRIST'S SPIRIT STANDING IN THE TOWN WHERE CHRIST GREW UP. [Exodus, xx.]—
The twentieth chapter of Exodus contains the ten commandments. We put this picture of the English Orphanage at Nazareth to illustrate it, because in Christ the hole law was summed up and fulfilled, and the beautiful view we give above was taken in the city where Christ grew up. The English Orphanage at Nazareth is a school under the direction of the Established Church of England. It is conducted by consecrated women, and has been the means of accomplishing a great deal of good for the poor orphans in Palestine. No institution could more fittingly stand as a concrete illustration of what Christ has done and is doing for childhood. This school is an embodiment of His own love as expressed through the words: "Suffer little children to come nuto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

Whatever be the meaning of this prohibition, there can be no doubt of its importance, as it is thrice enforced in the same words. It is here the last of the judgments delivered to Moses during his first interview with God on the mount, ch. 20. 21, 22; 21. 1; 24. 34. On the renewal of the broken

(2) That one of the sins that did most early and most easily beset or entangle the nation, was the appetite for flesh. Hear the proof from their own lips, Ex. 10. 3, 'Would to God we had died in Egypt, when we sat by the flesh-pots.' See it in their fretful and angry tears, Nu. 11. 3, when they 'wept, and said, Who shall give us flesh to eat?' To a people and priesthood so disposed, it hibited days that the kid is said to be in or on its became therefore necessary to give 'precept upon precept' against epicurism in food, and especially against its introduction in their religious festivals. It is remarkable that this prohibition is twice connected with the offering of first-fruits, a festival peculiarly privileged as an occasion of domestic and national joy, De. 26. 11. to the ritual of divine service, and a solemn caveat But on no solemn occasion of thanksgiving has the dis-position to indulgence been more observable than in the celebration of the harvest-home-the very festival,

From Zec. 14. 21 it appears that seething was the common mode of preparing the feast of the sacrifices. But amongst God's ordinances for sacrifice, we find the following: Le. 22. 27, 'When a bullock, or goat, or sheep, is brought forth, then it shall be seven days under the dam, and from the eighth day and thenceforth it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the mother's milk; and as during that period it could not be sacrificed to the honour of God, so, during a like period, it should not be devoted either to the sustenance or epicurism of man. The prohibition was therefore a special memorial to the priests, for a strict adherence against any infringement, through temptation of appetite-a restraint, which, if the priests faithfully imposed upon themselves, there was every reason to

The sprinkling of the blood on the altar, the book, the young men, the elders, and the piliars which represented the people, denoted the satisfaction of God's perfections, the fulfilment of the broken law, and the purification of men's consciences by the blood of Jesus. Hence, in ver. 9, 10, God, perhaps in human shape, appears as smiling on them; and they, with comfort and safety, feast in his presence.

Ver. 5. [Shittim-wood. The particular wood called shittim, sittinus, and sittah, is merely matter of conjecture. The Septuagint translate it incorruptible-wood -a name that, in some degree, may apply to many species. Jerome says it grows in Arabia, and resembles the white-thorn in colour and leaves; and is so large as to yield long planks, which are hard, tough, with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel." It is impossible to imagine a contrast greater than that found between the elements of worship among the Egyptians and ench as were introduced among the Hebrews by Moses. The great difference in the civilizations developed by the Egyptians and the Israelites may be accounted for by considering the infinite distance between their religions. In this twenty-second verse we have reference made to the mercy seat between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, and in this picture we have a view of an immense sarcophagus of an Apis Bull in the Serapeum near Memphis. The Apis Bull was the sacred animal of Ptah. No wonder the Egyptians were a degraded people, and that the Israelites through a pure form of worahio came to the highest civilization of ancient times.

[Exodus, xxviii: 36.]—"And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, holiness to the lord." All the rites and ceremonies, and types and shadows, and burnt offerings and sin offerings and peace offerings that were used by divine appointment among the children of Israel tended to teach two great truths: first, that the Lord God is holy, and second, that he demands holiness on the part of his people. For two thousand years God was preparing the children of Israel through the appointments of the Jewish church for the coming of His own Son. The Church of the Annunciation in Nazareth stands as a memorial of what the angel said to Mary: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, and therefore, also, that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." This church is situated within the walls of the Latin monastery in Nazareth and is generally the first place visited by travelers to this city of our Savior's boyhood.

1 This remarkable ceremony appears to have been intended to indicate the com-plete dedication of the priests to the ser-vice of the Lord, and vice of the Lord, and their complete purification by blood. The ears, as organs of hearing, were representatives of the mental powers; the hands and feet, as instruments of acting, represented the life and walk.—P.

of life to God. (2) In the three forms of bread the | final and total deliverance of believers from the body | high-priest's garments were hereditary, ver. 28, so is the surrender of the means of life. (3) In the consecration, we may remark the washing of Aaron and his sons. In this we have set forth, in emblem, the introduction of believers, 'by the washing of regeneration,' and renewing of the Holy Ghost, Tit. 3. 5; in the clothing we have their justification by 'the righteousness which is of God through faith,' Phi. 3. 9; in the crowning we have that honour to which the Father raises all who serve the Son, Jn. 12. 26; in the anointing we have that outpouring of the Spirit by which believers are endowed, instructed, and qualified for the holy man. Next the blood was sprinkled round about the offices and duties to which they are called, 1 Jn. 2. 20, 27; while in the girding of the garments we have that things. Finally the blood, the emblem of redemption;

of sin and death, Ro. 7. 24, 25. The ear of Aaron and his sons was first touched with the blood, for 'faith cometh by hearing,' and nothing to a sinner is worth the hearing but the 'blood that cleanseth from all sin,' I Jn. 1. 7. The thumb, the chief instrument of holding, and the thumb of the right hand, as the emblem of active power, was next touched; then the great toe of the right foot, the chief supporter of speedy and equable movement in walking or running, the Spirit signifying the need of pardon to the active powers of the whole altar, to remind believers of the sinfulness of their holy things. Finally the blood, the emblem of redemption;

Poured out plentifully upon his head, Ps. 133. 3.

H ALL OF GODS, MUSEUM, CAIRO—ILLUSTRATING THE DIFFER-ENCE BETWEEN THE GODS THE EGYPTIANS WORSHIPED AND THE ONE GOD THE ISRAELITES WORSHIPED. [Exodus, xxx:10.]—
"And Aaron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin offering of atonement: once in the year shall he make atonement upon it, throughout your generations; it is most holy unto the Lord." We give another illustration of a view taken in the Hall of the Gods in the Egyptain Museum, which enables us to see again what a vast contrast there was between the gods of wood and stone worshiped by the Egyptians and the God of the whole earth worshiped by the Israelites. The horns of the altar upon which Aaron was to make an atonement were by the ark of the testimony, directly in front of the mercy seat and very close to the Divine presence. The truth taught by this was that prayer brings us into the presence of God. The heart, instead of being fixed upon idols of stone, is to be drawn upward and fixed in worship and adoration upon its Creator and Redeemer.

[Exodus, xxxii:4.]—"And he received them at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf; and they said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." We have in this thirty-second chapter of Exodus the account of Aaron's molten calf, which was made of the carrings of the women of Israel while Moses delayed on the mount. The children of Israel got their idea of the worship of a calf from the Egyptians. The Serapenm, where the Apis Bulls were buried, is not far from the Step Pyramid, a picture of which we give above. The Step Pyramid is generally thought to have been built by the fourth king of the first dynasty. It is therefore regarded as older than the Pyramids of Gizeh. The door which led into it was inscribed with the name of a king called Ra-nub. The steps of the pyramid are six in number, and are respectively 38, 36, 34½, 32, 31 and 29½ feet in height.

START OF THE PROCESSION OF THE FESTIVAL OF THE MAH'MAL. [Exodus, xxxii:23, 24.]—We see in the 23d and 24th verses of the 32d chapter of Exodus how the children of Israel had imbibed the ideas of idolatry in vogue among the Egyptians. In the view above we have a scene representing idolatry among the Egyptians of to-day. While the Mohammedans are said to worship the one God, yet they attach a sacredness and divine significance to things which make of them as complete idols as were held in adoration by their ancient ancestors.

This festival of the Mah'Mal is annually observed in Cairo. It is popularly called the procession of the Holy Carpet. It has reference to the pilgrimage that is made e.ery year to Mecca by devout Mohammedans. The Mah'Mal is a litter made of wood in the form of a pyramid, in which the carpet is placed to be carried to Mecca. This carpet for the mosque at Mecca is manufactured in Constantinople and sent to Cairo at the expense of the Sultan.

TEMPLE OF THE SPHINX—BUILT BEFORE JOSEPH CAME TO EGYPT. [Exodus, x1: 2.]—Moses commanded the children of Israel on the first day of the month to set up the tabernacle of the congregation and to put therein the ark of the testimony and cover the ark with the veil. We give a view here of the temple of the Sphinx, the place of worship among the Egyptians which had heen often seen by the Israelites. Yet it is remarkable that though they had been in Egypt 430 years and had for a part of that time been in the midst of absolute slavery, that upon leaving Egypt they were found to have so few of the heathen ideas of worship characteristic of the Egyptians. This can only be accounted for upon the hypothesis that the Jews from generation to generation handed down to their children their peculiar national ideas of religion. The worship of the temple of the Sphinx was a long way from the worship of the tabernacle.

34 Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.

35 And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.

The whole east end was an entrance, and bung over with a fine veil of embroidered linen, suspended on five pillars or boards by golden hooks; and just before it, in the court, stood the brazen altar and laver. This tent was distinguished into two apartments. The first, or holy place, was in length twelve yards and six inches; into which only the clean priests might enter.

At the inner or west end of it, stood the golden candlestick, altar of incense, and table of show-bread. The second, or most holy place, or oracle, was at the west end of the former, and separated from it by a fine veil of embroidered linen, suspended on four pillars, fixed erect in large sockets of silver. REFLECTIONS.—It is comely when new years are commenced with remarkable transactions for God, and when everything is performed and placed in due order; for God is ready to meet such as are occupied in his service, and remember him in all their ways. Desolate and dreary are ordinances if without the presence of God; but if the Spirit of God and of glory rest upon us, we may be well comforted, for God is with us and for us; and who then can be against us! But was not this reared tabernacle a type of our once ap-him dwells all the fulness of the Godhead. He is the mean of all our fellowship with God; and the treasury of all that atonement, purification, light, food, intercession, and acceptance, which is necessary for our souls. In his debased state he was made the atonement, the laver of purification; in his exalted state he is the eternal rest of JEHOVAH, and the enlightener, advocate, and feeder of his people. Was it not likewise a figure of the gospel-church, planned by the wisdom of God, and reared up by inspired ministers of Christ! Outwardly mean, but inwardly glorious, she is the residence of God in Christ; and in her he is worshipped in an acceptable manner. In her a fulness of atonement, purification, spiritual light, and provision, of acceptable prayers, praises, and services, are to be found. Was it not a figure of heaven itself, where all darkness, at the west end, was set the ark covered by the golden the mercy-seat, and over-shadowed by the golden manhood and mediatorial office; devised of God, and and everything substantial, are to be found in the most

THE THIRD BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED

LEVITICUS.

This book so called from its compaction obscure mine of the gospei of Christ, typically exhibiting him as the great high-priest, sent and prepared of God for his work; exhibiting his sacrifice in its nature and form; and its influence disclosing the love of God, showing the curse of sin, procuring peace to the mind, quieting the guilty conscience, nourishing the soul, and purifying the heart; exhibiting the gospel-method of cleansing ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh or spirit, inherent or contracted, by due applications of his blood and Spirit: and, in fine, exhibiting the necessity of abstaining from sin in all its forms, appearances, and temptations; of exact attendance on instituted means of grace, and of perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord.

[The Moral Law, though in itself 'holy and just,' and 'the commandment good,' Ro. 7. 12, brings yet no gift to the sinner beyond 'the knowledge of sin;' while by that knowledge 'every mouth, is stopped' from either palliation or denial of its sinfulness, and 'all the world stands guilty before God,' Ro. 3. 19, 20. Now this law was delivered on the mount, 'amidst blackness, and darkness, and tempest, He. 12. 18. But the Ceremonial Law, as it has been called, which is partly delivered in Exodus, and partly in Deuteronomy, and is spread out at large in Leviticus, was delivered 'out of the tabernacle,' where God appeared in all the mild effulgence of the Shekinah, and spoke from the mercy-seat, 'God in Christ,' preparing the way for the 'word of reconciliation,' 2 Co. 5. 19. This book may accordingly be described as THE PICTORIAL GOSPEL; —the gospel for the eye as well as for the ear; the gospel to the sense, that it may conduct to faith.

Taking the Epistle to the Hebrews as the key to this book, we discover that the gospel was presented by it in types, figures, emblems, or shadows, He. 10. 1. A type is something shown as being more or less like another, and which it is intended to represent. The chief types of Christ are, (1) persons, as Adam, Noah, Moses, Joshua, David; (2) offices, as the priestly, prophetical, and kingly; (3) places, as Jerusalem, Zion; (4) times, as the jubilee; (5) laws, as of the Sabhath. of ths first-born; (6) feasts, as of tabernacles; (7) special food, as of unleavened bread; (8) things made, or buildings erected, according to God's direction, as the golden candlestick, the tabernacle, the temple; (9) offerings and sacrifices of various kinds. Now these, with many other things, are severally called types of Christ, in so far as, by any inferior excellence, they contain and exhibit some correspondent but far more exceeding excellence in Christ. But whilst one great end of the Levitical institutions was to exhibit Christ to the eye and the understanding, another great end was-to gain him, as the promised seed and Saviour, a place in the heart. But when Christ enters, idolatry must be cast out. The Levitical institutions were therefore God's great antidote to idolatry. Now one of the most universal and besetting forms of idolatry is 'covetonsness,' Col. 3. 5. To rebuke, to check, to condemn, and to mortify covetousness, will accordingly be found one great spiritual end of all the ceremonial enactments. Hence, at every approach of the sinner, God demands his heart, through a claim upon his hand, thus testing the sincerity of the worship offered, through the cheerfulness of the surrender made. But another of the most general objects of idolatry is the appetite. So general and so melancholy is this fact, that Paul records it 'weeping,' and so general, that he affirms that there are 'many whose god is their belly,' Phi. 3. 19. Now a large portion of the most stringent directions and interdicts of the Levitical institutions is dedicated to the subject of food; and in this department, no doubt, their primary reference was to him who is 'the bread of God which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world,' Jn. 6. 33. But another object was by every feeling of appetite which it was forbidden to gratify, unless with food which God had sanctioned, to impose a daily, habitual, and above all a divine, restraint upon the appetite, and thus to teach the true worshippers of God to 'keep under the body and bring it into subjection' in order to its being presented a

These views of the Levitical institutions, intended to condemn, and through the spiritual and mortifying use of the sacrifices utterly to cast out, the idols of covetousness and appetite, and thus to preserve undefiled the temple of the heart 'an habitation of God through the Spirit,' 1 Co. 3. 17; Ep. 2. 22, will serve to illuminate our path as we attempt to trace out their shadowy mysteries, till we discover their connection with the 'body of Christ,' 'the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth,' Ro. 10. 4. C.]

[Every type contained a prophecy. It was designed to foreshadow some greater event in the distant future. That design implied prophetic knowledge; and the embodiment of the design in the type was prophecy in act. All the ceremonies of the Mosaic law were types of Christ and his kingdom, expressly designed of God to prefigure the person or work of the Messiah. The rite of sacrifice embodied the grand truth of a crucified Saviour as the only ground of reconciliation between a guilty world and a holy God. The passover typified the character, sufferings, death, and salvation of Christ. So the sin-offering, the peace-offering, the red heifer, the day of atonement, &c., were all types of Christ in some aspect of his person or work. In a word, the whole Mosaic economy—its ordinances, vessels, observances, down to the minutest particular—was 'a shadow of good things to come;' but 'the body is of Christ.' It is only when the typical character of this book is kept fully before the mind that it becomes to the reader not merely interesting but most instructive. P.]

The washing of the inwards is thus explained by David, 'Thou desirest truth in the inward parts,' Ps. 51. 6; see Ps. 139. 23, 24. Ver. 11. [The former offering of the bullock, ver. 3, was at the door of the tabernacle which looks to the east, and there it appears to have been killed. The offering of the sheep or of the goats is however to be killed on the side of the altar northward. Why northward? Of Zion it is said, 'Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King, Ps. 48. 2. Now what excellence of situation is this! Simply, in the northern hemisphere, and beneath a burning sun, the excellence of shade. Now this is one of the Scripture emblems of Christ's protection. 'A man shall be an hiding-place from the wind, a covert from the tempest, the shadow of a great rock in a weary land, 'The Lord is thy keeper, thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by the prophet, Is. 4. 6; 25. 1, 4, 'There shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the daytime from the heat.' 'O Lord, thou hast been a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat.' According to these views, the sacrifice northward, being within the shadow of the altar, represents the refuge, protection, and covering, which the sacrifice of Christ affords to the believer, who can well adopt the words of the bride, Ca. 2. 3. 'I sat under his to God or man chiefly those of his soul, while his love to us made him to suffer the most cruel pain bearing our sins. He expired on a cross on the north-west of Jerusalem, and extends the virtue of his death daily to all known parts of the world! For us, poor and destitute criminals, he exerted all his care; suffered his soul and body to be divided asunder; but neither separated from his Godhead! And, after lying in his grave, he put off every mark of mortality and pain, and ascends to his throne on the right hand of God. What precious meat and drink offerings of blessings and comfort to himself and to my soul do attend this oblation!-Let me, therefore, all inflamed with his dying love, cheerfully render to the Lord the best that I have. Acknowledging myself the servant of death, and rejoicing that Jesus has borne my sins and guilt, let me, though unworthy to enter into God's house, offer my whole self, and all that I have, to the Lord, as a holy sacrifice, acceptable through Jesus Christ. Washed in every part, may my whole soul be inflamed with the sacred fire; the love of God shed abroad in my heart by the Holy Ghost! May a holy and prudent zeal for the Lord consume and burn up every selfish care and inward corruption; and influence me earnestly to lay out all my gifts and graces in winning poor sinners to a God in Christ.

ECOND AND THIRD PYRAMIDS—STANDING WHEN ABRAHAM WENT TO EGYPT.

[Leviticus, i.]—We place the picture of the Second and Third Pyramids in connection with the first chapter of Leviticus because that book was written by Moses, and these pyramids are found in the great cemetery of Memphis, where Moses is supposed to have been brought up. The Second Pyramid in the great cemetery of Memphis was built by Chephren, the third king of the fourth dynasty, B. C. 3666. A marble fragment inscribed with the name of Chephren was found near the temple close by this pyramid. This confirms the statements of Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus that Chephren built it. A statue of this king was found in the granite temple close by. The Third Pyramid was built by Men-kau-Ra, the fourth king of the fourth dynasty, B. C. 3633. Herodotus says that Men-kau-Ra was buried in this pyramid, and the sarcoplagus and the remains of the inscribed coffin of this king were found in one of its chambers by Howard Vice in 1837. The fragments of this coffin are now in the British Museum.

This meat-offering must be fine flour, for the same reason that the burnt-sacrifice was without blemish. The oil commingled in the offering, or merely anointing it, represented both the external and internal work of the Spirit; and the odoriferous frankincense, the complete acceptableness of the sacrifice of Christ. #### CHAPTER IV.

1 The sin-offering of ignorance for the priest, 13 for the congrega-tion, 22 for a ruler, 27 for any of the people.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

A 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a soul shall sin "through ignorance against any of the commandments of the Lord, concerning things which ought not to be done, and shall do against any of them:

3 If the briest that is anointed do sin according to the sin of the people; then let him bring, for his sin which he hath sinned, a 'young bullock without blemish unto the LORD for a sin-offering.

4 And he shall abring the bullock unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD; and shall lay his hand upon the bullock's head, and kill the bullock before the Lord.

5 And the priest that is anointed shall take of the bullock's blood, and bring it to the tabernacle of the congregation.

God for some mercy received. And as they respected the offerer's own advantage, he was allowed to offer either male or female. - [Peace-offering-an offering in payment of vows, and thankful acknowledgment of merpayment of vous, and thanktul acknowledgment by mer-cies, Ps. 116. 17, 18, or of prayers for deliverance and peace, Ju. 20. 26; 21. 4; 1 Ch. 21. 26. These offerings were lively emblems of 'the Prince of Peace,' 1s. 9. 6, of him 'who is our peace,' Ep. 2. 14. The chief peculiarities in this offering are, (1) That it may be either 'a male or female,' most probably shadowing out the doctrine of that complete spiritual equality of nation, rank, or sex. Paul declares, 'There is neither Greek nor Jew, bond nor free, male nor female, but all one in Christ Jesus,' Ga. 3. 28. (2) That it is divided to God, the priest, and the offerer, Le. 7. 11, an emblem of that blessed 'fellowship of his Son,' I Co. 1. 9, into which God has called believers, in which he comes into them and sups with them, and they with him, Re. 3. 26. C.]

Ver. 3. Here only the fat or tallow was the Lord's portion; the officiating priest had the breast, the right shoulder, the cheeks, and the maw, ch. 7. 30-32; De. 18. 3; and the offerer had the rest to feast upon with

Ver. 17. They were prohibited to eat fat or blood, (1) To teach them to beware of inhuman cruelties; (2) To exercise them in obedience, self-denial, and mortification of their appetites, (3) To direct them to consider their redemption as obtained only by the blood, and their sanctification effected by the Spirit of that I have accepted Jesus Christ, and shall to etering blood had three ends in view, (1) To preserve a faithful and reverent regard to the 'blood that maketh atonement,' Le. 17. 11. (2) To preserve from the abominable idolatries of the heathen, of which David speaks, 'Their sorrows shall be multiplied that hasten after another god, their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer.' (3) As a religious check upon cruelty to the lower animals. The law against fat cannot be explained upon any dietetic principle peculiar to eastern countries; moderately used, it is not unwholesome either in warm or cold climates. But it can justly be accounted for on the principle of the idolatry of the appetite, which made Paul weep when he contemplated its extent and ravages, Phi. 3. 19, and as a principal minister to luxury, the use of the fat of the sacrificial error, and kings have been flattered as descendants, CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. To mark the sins of priests and of congregations as greater than those of rulers or of private persons, (1) The offering must be more valuable, a bullock; (2) The blood must be sprinkled on the altar of incense; (3) The whole flesh of the bullock must be burned; whereas a lamb or kid is only required from rulers or private persons; the blood is but sprinkled on the altar of the burnt-offering, and the fat only is burned, and the flesh reserved for the officiating priests.

Ver. 3. [Flattery is an object of God's deepest ab-horrence. The Lord 'shall cut off all flattering lips,' Ps. 12. 3. But flattery, whether of self or others, is yet one of the most extensive and destructive diseases in society, Ps. 26. 2; Pr. 26. 28, claimed as a right inherent in certain ranks and offices. Accordingly, all church twenty feet by fifteen, in which it is said that the Virgin and her Son spent a part of their time during their sojourn in Egypt to avoid the wrath of Herod. The general shape of the church is nearly oblong. The wooden pulpit inside is of rosewood, inlaid with designs in ebony set with ivory edgings. There are many specimens of very beautiful workmanship inside. There are very handsome carvings representing St. Demetrius, Mar George, Abu-sephen, the nativity and the Last Supper.

COPTIC CHURCH—IN THE CRYPT OF WHICH CHRIST IS SAID TO HAVE SPENT PART OF THE SOJOURN IN EGYPT WITH HIS MOTHER MARY. [Leviticus, ix.] a part of the fits remote connection with Moses. Old Cairo is between New Cairo and Memphis, and Moses was brought up at Memphis and educated at Heliopolis. In going from Heliopolis to Memphis he would pass through Old Cairo. This church stands in the middle of the Roman Fortress of Babylon in Egypt. There is a crypt in the Last Supper.

LD CAIRO—NEAR THE ISLAND OF RHODA, WHERE MOSES WAS DISCOVERED. [Leviticus, viii:10.]—Old Cairo is upon the suburbs of Modern Cairo, and lies between Memphis, where Moses was brought up, and Heliopolis, where he was educated. It is in the neighborhood of the country in which the children of Israel dwelt in Egypt for 430 years. Near Old Cairo, according to Josephus, stood the fortress of the Babylon of Egypt, which was founded by the Babylonian mercenary soldiers of Cambyses, B. C. 525. Diodorus says that the Babylon of Egypt, which was occupied by the site where what is called Old Cairo now stands, was founded by Assyrian captives in the time of Rameses II., who was the Pharaoh who oppressed the children of Israel. This shows us that the particular site we see is connected with the early history of Egypt. During the reign of Augustus, Old Cairo was the headquarters of one of the Roman legions garrisoned in Egypt.

6 As a reward of your labour in mak-ing atonement,

Israel all the statutes which the LORD hath spoken unto them by the hand of Moses.

12 ¶ And Moses spake unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons that were left, Take the pmeat-offering that remaineth of the offerings of the Lord made by fire, and eat it without leaven beside the altar: for it is most holy.

13 And ye shall eat it in the holy place, because it is thy due, and thy sons' due, of the sacrifices of the Lord made by fire: for so I am commanded.

14 And qthe wave-breast and heave-shoulder shall ye eat in a clean place;4 thou, and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee: for they be thy due, and thy sons' due, which are given ont of the sacrifices of peace-offerings of the children of Israel.

15 The heave-shoulder and the wave-breast shall they bring, with the offerings made by fire of the fat, to wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD; and it shall be thine, and thy sons' with thee, by a statute for ever; as the LORD hath commanded.

16 ¶ And Moses diligently sought the goat of the sin-offering, and, behold, it was burnt: and he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron which were left alive, saying,

17 Wherefore have ye not eaten the sinoffering in the holy place, seeing it is most holy, and God hath given it you to "bear the imquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the LORD?

18 Behold, "the blood of it was not brought in within the holy place: ye should indeed have eaten it in the holy place, as I commanded.

19 And Aaron said unto Moses, Behold, this day have they offered their sin-offering and their burnt-offering before the Lord; and such

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 2. Nadab and Abihu had been honoured with seeing God, Ex. 24. 9, 10, but how little privileges may be improved appears in their selfwilled offering of strange fire, 'which God commanded them not.' What an unexpected event! The tabernacle service commences with rebellion and judgment; the perfume of the anointing oil is dissipated in devouring fire; the holy garments become winding-sheets; dear relatives become corpse-bearers; and no head is uncovered, no garment rent, lest wrath come upon all the people. Even the father's heart bows to the justice | And why is Moses content with intimation of such a sin in the narrative; and secondly, it is not the manner of Moses to conceal any faults, even in his brother or sister; therefore we conclude that, not drunkenness, but self-will in the worship of God, both without and against divine authority, was the real transgression for which they died. Let Christians in the enjoyment of privileges beware of their abuse. Nadab and Abihu sin-the fire devours them, leaving not an instant for intercession. So John warns the church, 'If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it,' I Jn.

REFLECTIONS. -Stand in awe, my soul, and sin not! Let no honours, no gifts, no graces, render thee proud or inattentive to God's institutions. Who can stand before this holy Lord God, the fire of whose zeal for his own institutions burns hottest the nearest to his altar! His noted favours and his tremendous judgments are often most closely connected: and, for the warning of others, he sometimes punishes the first transgressors with the most fearful severity, and deeply marks their sin in their punishment. How insufficient Ver. 20. [Here there had been such a departure from the divine ritual that Moses was angry. Why then does no judgment come on Eleazar and Ithamar?]

43 Yei shall not make yourselves abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby;

44 For 'I am the Lord your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy; for I am holy: neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

45 For I am the Lord that bringeth you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: mye shall therefore be holy; for I am holy.

46 This is the law of the beasts, and of the fowl, and of every living creature that moveth in the waters, and of every creature that creepeth upon the earth;

47 To omake a difference between the unclean and the clean, and between the beast that may be eaten and the beast that may not be eaten.

1 The purification of a woman after child-birth. 6 Her offerings

▲ND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a awoman have conceived seed, and born a man-child, then she shall be unclean seven days; according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean. 3 And in the beighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.

- 4 And she shall then continue in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days: she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled.
- 5 But if she bear 'a maid-child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.1

6 ¶ And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled for a son, or for a daughter, she shall bring a lamb of the first year2 for a burnt-offering, and a young pigeon or a turtle-dove for a sin-offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest;

7 Who shall offer it before the Lord, and make an satonement for her; and she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath born ha male or a female.

8 And if 'she be not able to 'bring a lamb,' then she shall bring two turtles, or two young of the sufficiency pigeons; the one for the burnt-offering, and the other for a sin-offering: and the priest shall make an atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 2. Leprosy, derived from a Greek word signifying a scale, is one of the most terrible of the many diseases our 'flesh is heir to. Willan describes three varieties that have been observed in Western Europe, and Mason Good, who examined the subject, not merely as a physician, but as an expositor of Scripture, considers them as identical leprosy as confined to one incurable form; but, under has ventured to deny; and patches dark and livid, and in either case extremely loathsome to the beholders and distressing to the sufferer. But though'the leprosy appears at first as a mere local disease in the skin, it afterwards discovers its constitutional character, and the bones and joints, and in some cases the teeth, are affected; the toes and. fingers fall off in succession, and the body remains a miserable fragment of its former self, where life still lingers in the midst of indescribable torments. NTERIOR OF THE MOSQUE OF AMR—NEAR WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED.

[Leviticus, xiii:1.]—We give here a view of the Mosque of Amr, because it helps us to see a place of worship as it looks to-day, in the land of Egypt, where Moses grew up. This is in the neighborhood of old Cairo, and as Moses grew up at Memphis and was educated at Heliopolis, in going from Memphis to Heliopolis he would pass through this same neighborhood where this mosque stands to-day. This is the most interesting mosque in Cairo. There is almost a wilderness of columns of different styles of architecture, perhaps taken from older buildings and brought together here to adorn this one. There are a couple of columns on the west side of the mosque once used as a test of character. They were said to be so close together that only an honest man could squeeze through them. The Khedive has now walled up this space.

OSQUE OF AMR—STANDING NEAR THE ISLAND OF RHODA WHERE MOSES WAS FOUND IN THE RIVER NILE. [Leviticus, xiv.]—We give here a picture of the oldest mosque in Egypt to illustrate further the land of Moses. It is, in Old Cairo, and its foundatious were laid A. D. 643. It is called the Mosque of Amr because the land upon which it is built was given by Amribu-el-Asi. Of the original mosque it is said very little remains. Nearly all of that building was burned down at the end of the ninth century. During the tenth century the mosque was enlarged and rebuilt. The court measures 350 by 400 feet, and the building contains 366 pillars. There is one row on the west side, three rows on the north and south sides, and six rows on the east side. In the northeast corner is the tomb of Abdallah, the son of Amr. Upon one of the pillars is the name Mu-ham-med. These pillars are of all styles of architecture, which is supposed to grow out of the fact that they were brought from other buildings in Cairo.

There he appears in the presence of God for us, pleading his own merits, and offering up the incense of continual intercession for us, putting off his robes of debasement, laying aside every vestige of the likeness of sinful flesh, and clothed and crowned with glory and honour. The sprinkling of his blood sanctifies the church, and all the ordinances of it; and renders our sacrifices and incense of grateful obedience, of fervent prayer and praise, acceptable to his Father. [Leviticus, xvii.]—Most of the antiquities now contained in the Gizeh Museum are such as antedate the time of Moses, or else are of such things as were contemporary with him. They nearly all belong to the Ancient or the Middle Empire, and there is no better way to get a proper conception of the magnificence and grandeur of the civilization in the midst of which Moses grew up than to take a walk through the many hallways and rooms of this the most interesting museum in some respects on earth. Sometimes we look into the very faces of the statues representing the men with whom Moses lived. A study of Moses through this civilization heightens our admiration for the man who "refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." No man of whom we have any record in history ever sacrificed more of worldly prospects and opportunity than this the greatest Jeader of Israel.

HALL OF SARCOPHAGI, GIZEH MUSEUM—IN WHICH WERE PLACED THE BODIES OF THE REIGNING CLASSES OF EGYPT. [Leviticus, xix.]—Sarcophagi are the stone coffins in which the rich and distinguished people of Egypt were buried. It was only the rich people who were able to defray the expense of embalming, tomb-building, and the like in vogue among the highest class of the Egyptians. To mummify a body alone cost about $1,250. Some of the sarcophagi must have cost thousands of dollars. But it was because the Egyptians devoted such pains to the preservation of their dead and to the building of tombs that we have to-day such an accurate knowledge of their history, and that we are able to reconstruct the very times in which Moses lived and to get a correct conception of the civilization in all its details in the midst of which he grew up. And as we study Moses in connection with Egyptian history, more and more will our admiration for him be increased, and the more will we be inclined to the conviction that he was led by the spirit of God.

THE DRAWER OF WATER FROM THE NILE—THE METHOD OBSERVED IN THE DAYS OF MOSES. [Levericus, xxii:1.]—We give this picture simply because it illustrates a scene in the land of Moses, and the view we have is a characteristic scene. It is not modern; it is just the very method of drawing water observed in the days of Moses. Labor is so cheap in Egypt and modern machinery so expensive, that labor-saving machines have not yet been introduced into Egypt. Even merchandise can he transported on the backs of camers more cheaply than by railway. The cheapest thing in Egypt is human muscle, and until the Egyptians are educated to a higher plane of life, they will draw water as they have always done. This water is used for irrigating the soil. It is taken from the Nile and poured into little trenches cut through the land, and from these it is emptied into other trenches, until whole squares of the soil are irrigated.

25 Neither from a dstranger's hand shall ye | A.M. 2514 B.C. 1490. | offer the bread of your God of any of these; dEx. 12. 43 ch.19. because their corruption is in them, and blemishes be in them: they shall not be accepted for you.2

26 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

27 When a bullock, or a sheep, or a goat, is brought forth, then it shall be 'seven days under the dam; and from the eighth day, and thenceforth, it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the Lord.

28 And whether it be cow or ewe,3 ye shall not kill it gand her young both in one day.

29 ¶ And when ye will offer ha sacrifice of thanksgiving unto the Lord, offer it at your own will.

30 On the same day it shall be eaten up; ye shall leave none of it until the morrow: I am the Lord.

31 Therefore shall ye keep my commandments and do them: I am the LORD.

32 Neither shall ye profane my holy name: but I will be hallowed among the children of Israel: "I am the Lord which hallow you,

Thus, love, commingled with the world, cannot co-exist with the love of God, 1 Jn. 2. 15; but love, commingled with the knowledge of Christ, is very God dwelling in the heart, I Jn. 4. 16. Love in the one combination we must expel; love in the other must abound more and more, Phi. 1. 9; 1 Th. 3. 12. It is thus that leaven representing the active principle of the sinner in a state of worse than Egyptian bondage, Ro. 6, 16, is utterly to be case out; while leaven representing the active principle of a believer 'made free from sin,' Ro. 6. 18, is carefully to be retained. This feast being one of the harvest the

Joshua at Jericho, ch. 6. 4, as well as by Asaph, Ps. | 81. 3 (for the Hebrew original distinguishes them from the silver trumpels, Nu. 10. 2, 10), many of the Jewish rabbins are of opinion that the feast of trumpets was a memorial of the deliverance of Isaac by the substitution of a ram, Ge. 22. 13: and because the original Hebrew in the text means a shout of a multitude, as well as blowing of trumpets, others are of opinion that it was an anniversary memorial of creation, according to Job 38. 7. Basil and Theodoret considered it a memorial of the trumpet in the delivery of the law on in the judgment and destruction of the mystical Babylon, it was an anniversary memorial of creation, according Sinai, Ex. 19. 16; Patrick, as a solemn celebration of the entrance of the civil new year. Both Jennings and Cruden deliver it as an admitted opinion that the Scriptures do not, as in other cases, acquaint us with

of the trumpet, except blown by an experienced trumpeter, and falling upon the practised ear of the soldier instructed in the secret meaning of the different calls, see Nu. 10. 4; 1 Co. 14. 8. Hence, in the New Testament, the trumpet's voice is always for judgment and deliverance, as in I Co. 15. 52; and in the last scenes of Revelation, during the trumpet of the seventh angel, we are told, 'the mystery of God shall be finished, and the final deliverance of the church of the redeemed

AIRO FROM THE CITADEL—NEAR WHERE THE ISRAELITES SOJOURNED IN EGYPT. [Leviticus, xxiv:1.]—We are viewing this city from the Citadel, which is a small town in itself, and was built by Mohammed Ali.
From the Citadel we have a fine view of Cairo. The pyramids are in the distance to the west, and the Nile is seen winding its way toward the sea between. Cairo has a population of about 500,000. It has absorbed into itself and may be called the modern representative of Memphis and Heliopolis, and the surrounding cities of ancient times. The Khedive spends part of the year here. Cairo was the home of the distinguished pasha who aided DeLesseps in opening the Suez canal. It is a strange commentary upon history that this region, once swept by the Pharaohs, should now be under the dominion of a Christian nation. The English soldier is seen on all sides in Cairo.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Against idolatry. 2 Religiousness. 3 A blessing is promised to them that keep the commandments. 14 A curse is denounced against those that break them. 40 God promiseth to remember those that repent.

TE shall make you ano idols nor graven image, I neither rear you up a standing image, neither shall ye set up any image of stone in your land, to bow down unto it: for I am the Lord your God.3

- 2 Yeb shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the Lord.

explained and defended on its own merits, which are these. (1) These services were bought at their just price; not from men-stealers, traffickers condemned of God, Ex. 21. 16, but from the parties themselves. (2) They might be redeemed or manumitted without any legal hindrance, as is evident from the case provided for, Ex. 19. 20. (3) They are under the protection of the law, Jos. 9. 20, 21. (4) By comparing Ju. 1. 27, 28, 30, 33, 35, with 1 Ki. 9. 20, 21, the bond-service, in a most remarkable instance, will be found a mere rent-charge or tribute, either in labour or money, in return for the possession of houses or lands. And farther, from Ezr. 2. 21; Ne. 7. 5, 6, 57, 61; 10. 28, compared with Ex. 12. 44, and with the everlasting covenant with Abraham, Ge. 17. 12, 13, 27, it will appear that bond-servants were (as in the case of Solomon's servants) legally incorporated with the church and kingdom, and entitled to all the covenant privileges of Abraham's lineal descendants. (5) By the Mosaic law every servant, and therefore, in a special manuer, the privileged bond-servant, was protected by law from expedients, but by eternal principles: but it is to be affection to created comforts, and never hasten to be measure, verified in some of their former deliverances; rich, but depend on God for daily bread, in following the ways of religion and charity. In view of my eternal jubilee, let me consider wisely the cases of the poor; study equity in all my dealings; and stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made me free. Blessed be his glorious name-though I have forfeited all my happiness-though I have sold myself a bond-servant to Satan and my lusts—my kinsman-redeemer Christ has paid all my debt, all my ransom! And whom the Son hath made free, they are free indeed! Let me adore his goodness, that, while almost all the world are wilfully in bondage, the true and faithful, according to the Spirit, are made the Lord's freemen.

> CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 1-46. This chapter, which mostly corresponds with De. xxviii., is a summary of the oracles and providences of God relative to the Jewish nation. In the first part of it we have a summary of much of the contents of those promises especially in the mercies which they received in their return from Babylon, and afterwards until the time of Christ. But we expect a more full accomplishment of it in the latter days, when the Jews shall be converted to the Christian faith, and replaced in their own land.

[Ver. 5. Because God's temporal promises and threatenings were so many, some have thoughtlessly asserted that he urged not the doctrine of a future state; but they who assert this omission 'do err, not knowing the Scriptures;' for when we examine the wondrous catalogue of promises commencing ver. 4, we find at least twelve distinct temporal blessings; but, in addition to these, God promises, ver. 9, his covenant to be established. Now, that covenant was everlasting, not merely with successive generations, but with Abraham individually, personally, Ge. 17. 7, 9, 10. Now, if the covenant between God and Abraham was everlasting, Abraham (herein inherited everlasting life; and Israel, in the establishment of that covenant, received the doctrine and the promise of immortality, already met with, and of the whole of those hereafter as well as of the temporal blessings with which it was

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED

This book is so called because it so largely represents the repeated numbering of the Hebrew warriors, Levites, spies, punished transgressors; their oblations, oooty, and their journeys, &c., in the wilderness. It contains (1) The principal articles of their history for thirty-nine years: particularly of the numbers, stations, and marching-order of their tribes, i.-iv. ix. x.; the oblations of their princes at the dedication of the tabernacle, vii.; the consecration of the Levites, viii.; observation of the second passover, ix.; departure from Sinai, x.; destruction of the murmurers by a fiery pestilence, and the flesh for which they had lasted—appointment of seventy elders to assist Moses, xi.; Miriam's leprosy and cure, xii.; the search of Canaan by spies, and their punishment for a contempt of that promised land, xiii. xiv.; the punishment of Korah and his companions, and of the people who murmured at it, xvi.; the budding of Aaron's rod, xvii.; the mishehaviour of Moses and Aaron when the people murmnred at Kadesh-refusal of a passage by the Edomites-and the death of Miriam and Aaron, xx.; the victory over Arad-plague of fiery serpents, and cure of their bites-conquest and division of the kingdoms of Sihon and Og, xxi. xxxii.; the repeated attempts of Balak and Balaam to curse the Israelites, and God's defeating of them, xxii.-xxiv.; the enticement of the Israelites to whoredom and idolatry by Midianitish women, and the revenge thereof in the death of twenty-four thousand Israelites, and the almost utter destruction of the Midianites, xxv. xxxi.; a third numeration of the Israelites, xxvi.; a rehearsal of their journeys, xxxiii.; a delineation of their territory in Canaan, and an appointment of twelve princes to divide it, xxxiv. (2) With these narratives is intermingled a variety of laws concerning the ejection of unclean persons from the camp—suspicion of wives for adultery, v.; Nazariteship—priests' blessing the people, vi.; lighting of sacred lamps, viii.; observance of the passover in the second month, ix.; making and blowing of silver trumpets, x.; and concerning meatofferings, drink-offerings, heave-offerings, sin-offerings-stoning for breach of the Sabbath-fringes on the borders of their garments, xv.; sacred portion of the priests and Levites, xviii.; purification by the ashes of the red heifer, xix.; inheritance and marriage of heiresses, xxvii. xxxvi.; oblations at sacred festivals, xxviii. xxix.; vows, xxx.; manslayers and cities of refuge, xxxv.

[The book of Numbers has been pronounced the most perplexing in sacred history, and what has perplexed the believing inquirer has afforded simple field for infidel objection: but as to the very being, providence, and attributes of God, there have been, and still are, many alleged objections; we are not to be surprised if similar assaults be made upon any part of his word, nor are we to be discouraged by the perplexities of believing inquirers: the real difficulties of Scripture, for such there are, exhibit the analogy hetween God's word and works, while they afford the happiest employment to the intellect, inculcate humility, exercise patience, and call to prayer, Ja. 1. 5; Lu. 11. 13; Jn. 14. 26. The chief difficulty of this book arises from the population returns. Jacob's family at their entrance into Egypt amounted but to seventy-five; at the exodus, in little more than two hundred years after, the men are estimated about 600,000, Ex. 12. 37; 30. 26; and at the military census afterwards made, they amount to 603,550, ch. 1. 46. Now, as these numbers would, on the most moderate computation, give a total for the Jewish caravan, independent of the 'mixed multitude,' Ex. 12. 38, that accompanied them, of about 2,400,000; the question arises, How can we credit this increase? To a humble inquiring believer it will be something to be reminded of God's peculiar promise to Ahraham, Ge. 15. 5, and here he might rest; while the sceptic and the infidel, if they really sought for truth, not for cavilling, might find a ready answer in ordinary political statistics. Do they not know, that in the average of circumstances, population doubles at least in twenty five years? That in favourable rural districts it doubles in fifteen years? that Euler calculates its doubling nnder thirteen, and that Sir W. Petty fixes it at ten years? Now allowing the Mosaic narrative the advantage of these calculations—and candour cannot deny it the most favourable—the imaginary impossibility of the increase from 75 to 2.400,000 totally vanishes; and while the promise to Abraham is seen fulfilled in the numbers of his posterity, the result requires not for its solution a continuous miracle, but merely that providential blessing of fruitfulness which God invariably bestows on peaceful, temperate, and industrious habits. But while the soundness of this solution cannot, upon any historical ground, be statistically gainsaid, all possibility of cavil is removed by considering that the national name and privileges of Israelites were not confined to the lineal descendants of Abraham. This will be evident from the following considerations. (1) Abraham, when childless, expects the son of a servant 'horn in his house' to be his heir, Ge. 15. 3. (2) His house-born servants at that period amounted to 318 adult males, Ge. 14. 14. (3) When God renewed his promise, Ge. 17. 13, 27, all his then existing house-born servants, as well as his future purchases, were 'graffed in,' Ro. 11. 17, were naturalized, so to speak, by the sign of the everlasting covenant. (4) Isaac, Abraham's son, so far from declining in family prosperity, 'waxed great, and went forward, and grew until he became very great;' and especially had 'great store of servants,' Ge. 26. 13, 14. (5) Jacob, at his return, Ge. 35. 27, had, besides his own children, 'men-servants,' Ge. 32. 5, perfectly able to protect themselves and their cattle, Ge. 33. 15. What accession of property Jscob obtained by the death of his father we are not a

But if we may thus legally commence our calculations with more than the seventy-five descendants of Jacob, why are they particularized? The answer is to lay a distinct groundwork for the development of providence and the fulfilment of prophecy, and specially to furnish the necessary preparation and evidence for the manifestation of Christ. And when any do farther sceptically ask, 'How could Egypt contain and support so many inhabitants?' the reply is, Measure its extent and observe its unparalleled fertility. 'How could the Egyptians govern so many discontented subjects? the reply is, Calculate in ancient or modern slave states the small proportion of masters to slaves. 'How could Pharaob expect to subdue such a numerous host?' the answer is, Calculate how many regular troops would fearlessly assail an unarmed multitude. 'What line of march did they occupy?' the reply is, Who would think of marshalling them in a single line? Not he that by divine instruction ordered the encampments in the wilderness, see ch. ii. But of answering such groundless cavils 'there is no end.' Better for the believer to see in Israel a family carried down with a famishing father in search of food, to a land where they are sustained by the filial love of a son, and the forgiving generosity of a brother; where they become as the sand in number, and yet are enslaved by a cruel tyrant, and from whom they are delivered by the destruction of all their enemies and the blood of a sacrifice—where, in a word, 'Christ is all in all,' exhibited wherever there is salvation, temporal, spiritual, or eternal. bourhood of Sinai, and to resume their journeys; it would prepare for their regular march and encampments, and it would promote the facility of their being trained for the wars which were before them.—J.

TOMB OF SULTAN BARKUK—ONE OF THE MODERN PHARAOHS OF EGYPT. [Numbers, i.]—We continue through this book of Numbers to illustrate the life of Moses by pictures taken from the land in which he grew up. The Tomb of Sultan Barkuk is really a mosque or place of Mohammedan worship. There stands above it two superb domes and two minarets. Under the dome at the north are the tombs of the male, and under the dome at the south are the tombs of the female, members of the family. Barkuk belonged to the family of the Circassian

Mameluke Sultans who reigned in Egypt from A. D. 1382 to 1517. The limestone pulpit in this mosque and the two minarets are beautiful specimens of stone work. Barkuk was a Circassian slave who raised himself to the throne by setting aside Haggi, a boy of six years and great grandson of Mohammed-en-Nasir. The reign of Barkuk was not peaceful. His intrigues and treachery so exasperated the Emirs that they conspired against him and finally dethroned him in 1389, but he was soon restored and reigned until 1399.

9 The tribe of Judah was much larger than any of the others. Dan stood second, but had 240 Ephrim and Manasseh that the state of height and the smallest of he twelve, and Benjamin came next to it. It will be seen by a comparison with the characteristic which was taken at the close of the wilderness journey, that the relative strength of the tribe changed very much during the forty years wandering. 45 So were all those that were numbered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel;

46 Even all they that were numbered were six hundred thousand, and three thousand, and five hundred and fifty.

49 Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel:

51 And ewhen the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down; and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

UP. [Numbers, iii: 1.]—"These also are the generations of Aaron and Moses, in the day that the Lord spake with Moses in Mount Sinai." This picture is fittingly placed in connection with the name of Moses, for it illustrates a place near Memphis where Moses was brought up. Bedrashen covers a part of the site of Memphis. On the ground lying around this village, a part of which we see the goats now browsing, and a part farther on where we see the palm trees standing, once stood the proud city of Memphis. Memphis was one of the oldest cities of history, and was founded by Menes, the first king of Egypt. The tract of country in the midst of which Memphis stood has been praised by ancient writers for its fertility. Diodorus speaks of its green meadows intersected with canals and their pavements of lotus flowers. Pliny says there were trees there of such girth that three men could not span them with extended arms.

ROAD TO HELIOPOLIS—NEAR THE SITE OF THE UNIVERSITY WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED. [Numbers, v.]—This is a scene on the road from Cairo to Heliopolis, and is fittingly placed in connection with the name of Moses. For it is generally agreed that Moses was educated at Heliopolis. In that ancient City of the Sun there once stood the most renowned university of the ancient world. And it was in this celebrated school that Moses was trained in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. There is a fanciful tradition told to tourists, who are supposed to believe everything, that Abraham was professor of astronomy in this university, and taught the Egyptians what he had learned of the stars in Chaldea. The road from Cairo to Heliopolis is about six miles in length, and the view we get of it in the above picture shows us some acacia trees on either side with a couple of camels and their attendants. The view is characteristic, and one is liable to meet such a company of peasants any hour of the day.

CHAPTER VI.

PILGRIMS FROM THE TOMB OF MOSES—SEEN JUST OUTSIDE THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM. [Numbers, vi.]—In the fifth and sixth verses of the thirty-fourth chapter of Joshua, it is said that "Moses died in the land of Moab, and was buried in a valley in the land of Moab over against Bethpeor, but no man knoweth of his sepulcher unto this day." Notwithstanding the plain teachings of Scripture on the subject the Mohammedans pretend to know where the grave of Moses is. They claim that it is to the south of the road between Jerusalem and Jericho. So, as we were leaving Jerusalem for Jericho, on the 25th day of April, 1894, just outside the walls of the Holy City we met a large number of pilgrims coming in from the so-called tomb of Moses. Upon this occasion the pilgrims appeared to be in a bad humor. They were firing pistols, and talking in a loud tone of voice as though they might be ready for mischief. Our dragoman told ns that they were always especially fanatical and irritable on their return from these pilgrimages to the graves of their saints.

PPROACH TO THE NILE BRIDGE. [Numbers, viii: 1.]—No view, perhaps, could be in greater contrast from the Egypt of Moses' time than the one given above of the approach to the Nile Bridge. Up to 1863, passage of the Nile was made by small ferry boats. Now we have a bridge of iron 1260 feet long, with stone buttresses. A pair of British lions sitting at the entrance of the bridge bespeak the fact that Egypt has passed under the influence of modern times and modern ideas. Across this bridge tourists now always pass to the pyramids. It perpetually presents a scene of life and color. There are donkeys and camels and carts and carriages going and coming throughout the day. Most tourists who visit the pyramids now go from Cairo in carriages, though occasionally a traveler prefers the old time method of traveling on a donkey.

85 Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed two thousand and four hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.

87 All the oxen for the burnt-offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat-offering; and the kids of the goats for sin-offering twelve:

88 And all the oxen, for the sacrifice of the peace-offerings, were twenty and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he-goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty. This was the dedication of the altar, after that it was anointed.

reason; for ingratitude is the basest vice. Discontented persons loathe their very blessings, and seem solicitous to make themselves miserable; readily preferring the worst things which God withholds to the best which of God for base and carnal ends, quickly become mur-murers when they meet with disappointments. A mixture of carnal and self-seeking men are ruinous to the church; and a mixture of carnal affections are the plague of the renewed heart. Through these it is that even the greatest saints are apt to lose their temper, extol their service, quarrel with the disposals of Providence, and distrust the power and kindness of God, when they meet with great provocations from their fellow-creatures-and to have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, when they are especially called to reprove them by a contrary conduct. But God often tries his people, chiefly in respect of their are ready to wish themselves freed from trials, rather than to glorify God under them; nay to w

Ethiopia, as a geographical term, is one of very indefinite and general application in Scripture, unquestionably extending both to Asia and Africa, Ge. 2. 13; Eze. 30. 5; 38.5. But if the name Ethiopian, or Cushite, be taken, not from the country, but the lineage of the woman, Moses had violated no law by his marriage: as God's prohibition on that head extended only to the most eminent graces, to humble them, and to prove them, when he finds them wanting; for the meekest Cushite. REFLECTIONS.—Too common, but very sinful, are contentions among saints; nor doth anything produce hotter disputes than jealousy of power. Grace, natural affection, duty, and safety, are all trampled under foot when men strive for grandeur and rule. But God takes a peculiar pleasure in vindicating and honouring his faithful ministers or people. He remarks exactly, and justly punishes, the injuries done to those who, from a meek regard to his law, will not avenge themselves. It is dangerous therefore to revile God's servants: they who do it shall at last be obliged to bow to them, and confess their sin. Yea, often God deals most sharply with bis principal children when they offend him; and marks the abominable nature of their sin in the filth, pain, or shame of their punishment. But it is becoming when offending saints make the deepest submissions. And acceptable to God, honourable to us, and effectual for our neighbour's advantage, are sincere and affectionate intercessions for those who have injured us. OLUMNS OF THE TEMPLE SERAPEUM, PUTEOLI—A TEMPLE BUILT OF MARBLE TAKEN FROM THE COUNTRY IN WHICH MOSES GREW UP. [NUMBERS XVI.]—
This picture of the temple of Serapeum, at Puteoli, standing near the place where St. Paul landed upon his first missionary journey to Italy, is placed in connection with the name of Moses in this chapter because it was a temple built in honor of an Egyptian god. Plutarch asserts that Serapis was Osiris after he had passed into the subterranean world. As if to complete the idea of a temple to an Egyptian deity the Corinthian pillars found in this marble structure are from Africa. This temple consisted of a square court enclosed by forty-eight marble and granite columns with forty-three small chambers adjoining. The portico rested on six Corinthian columns, three of which remain. In the center of the court stood a circular temple surrounded by sixteen marble pillars. By four flights of steps the interior was approached where statues of Serapis, now in the museum at Naples, were found.

Ver. 12. [The sin of Moses and Aaron is recorded. but not particularized, unless in so far as it may be inferred from the narrative. Amongst the internal evidences of the divine mission of Moses, we must rank the unparalleled candour with which he records his sin and his punishment. No hypocrite, imposing upon others—no enthusiast, imposing upon himself—has ever recorded or admitted his own errors. The deceiving hypocrite cannot afford to let in the light. The selfdeceived enthusiast has not discovered his own darkness. The sin of Moses seems to have consisted, (1) In angrily and provokingly calling the people 'rebels.' (2) In going beyond the divine command, ver. 8. merely to 'speak unto the rock,' and smiting it twice, either in anger or unbelief, or both. (3) In strange and unaccountable unbelief in the promise of God, of which he had bad so many trials. (4) In the expression, 'must WE fetch water?' he seems to attribute the miracle to himself and Aaron, rather than to God. Lord! what is man! Moses thy servant, meekest of | building. Ver. 21. [The Israelites were prevented for some reason from entering Canaan from the south, and were therefore compelled to pass along the eastern side of the Dead Sea, and cross the Jordan. The territory of the Edomites lay between the camp at Kadesh and the east bank of the Jordan. If not permitted to pass through Edom, a long, dreary, and dangerous journey must be undertaken through the desert of Arabia, Hence the message to the King of Edom, and the fair and urgent request for permission to pass through his land. When refused they were obliged to turn due south so as to sweep round the southern border of Edom. P.]

Ver. 23. [Mount Hor was within Edom. The camp of the Israelites was stationed doubtless in the great valley, at the western base of the range of which Hor is one of the peaks. The traditional tomb of Aaron still exists on the rocky summit of Mount Hor. It is a rock-hewn cave, surmounted by a small domed till I behold in him, as in a figure, Jesus, the great casion presents itself: and those are often ready to wish for death who are very unfit for it. Men's principal friends are often treated the worst; but the mercy and power of God are exerted for the relief of sinful rebels against him. Yet, alas! how prone are the best of men to unbelief under long or repeated trials, and to passion under great provocations! and often reproaches, just in their matter, may be very sinful in their manner. How lasting are quarrels between families and nations! and how inveterate the hatred of Edomites of the world against the church and people of God! little of earthly comforts can we hope for in our way to the Canaan above! but when believers look most beautiful on the borders of the grave, and when faith disarms death of all its terrors—when they depart deliberately and cheerfully into the joy of our Lord how comely and how comfortable! And it is a peculiar joy to dying ministers to see the cause of God transmitted into the hands of zealous and faithful successors. But let me not bid adieu to Aaron, the saint of God,

Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron thirty days, even all the house of Israel.

4 And Moab said unto the delders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

5 He sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beor, to Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his 3people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, they cover the face4 of the earth, and they abide over against

7 And the elders of Moab, and the elders of Midian, departed with the rewards of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

8 And he said unto them, Lodge here this knight, and I will bring you word again, as the Lord shall speak unto me. And the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

REFLECTIONS. - Continued courage and dependence upon God are highly necessary, that at last we may prove more than conquerors. Religious vows, when properly conducted, are likewise sometimes proof comfort, and fill our mouths with his praise: he can bestow noted victories in favour of his people, even on this side death. And what easy work it is to conquer the strongest enemies when God's time is come, and he helps us by his grace! Yet in these victories let me observe, that they who intend mischief to others, often fall into the pit which themselves have digged; that worldly possessions are changeable and frail; and especially that ill-gotten gain is seldom long enjoyed.

by no means improbable that his kindred in Moab may have been distinguished by similar qualities. C .-See note on Ex. 2. 15. P.]

REFLECTIONS .- Relations by blood are sometimes the bitterest enemies to one another, and seek to ruin those who might expect kindness from them. The most awful things in religion, imprecations of divine wrath not excepted, are often transformed into ordinances of the devil: and sinners, with great expense and toil court the assistance

ARCOPHAGUS DRINKING TROUGH NEAR NAZARETH—NEAR WHERE CHRIST WAS BROUGHT UP. [NUMBERS, xxiv: 17.]—Balaam's Prophecy of Christ: "I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel." Just a little way from Nazare has you pass toward Cana of Galilee. you reach a little village where there is a fountain and an ancient sarcophagus. These sarcophagi, found in many places in Palestine, are said to date from the time of the Romans. This picture is given here because it illustrates a scene in the neighborhood of Nazareth, often passed over by Christ when he was a boy. It illustrates the prophecy by Balaam which refers to Christ. This is a characteristic scene. We have the thorny cactus, the olive trees, the donkey and the little Arab boy.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and returned to his place: and Balak also went his ch.31.8. Jos. 13.22. way.

'Waters shall flow out of his two buckets; and his posterity shall be by many waters.' The meaning is—that Israel is likened to a man carrying two pails of water, after the eastern mode, upon his shoulders; and out of these water, the emblem and source of all richness, flows abundantly. His posterity too would grow up by many waters-in the most fertile regions of the earth. P.—Agag was king of the Amalekites, I Sa. 15.8, and it is probable it was the hereditary title of the monarchs of this people. For Israel to be higher than Agag, is to have power over the most inveterate of their enemies. --- Ver. 8. Ver. 24. This was fulfilled when first the Greeks, and afterwards the Romans, invaded Asia, subdued Assyria, Canaan, and the places about; and when their respective empires were, not long after, brought to ruin: the Greeks about one hundred years before Christ, and the Romans about A.D. 476; and will be more fully accomplished in the ruin of the Popish and Turkish empires. — [Eber is generally supposed to have given name to the Hebrews, though some eminent authorities assign a different etymology. It appears from Ge. 10. 25 that he had two distinguished sons, who became the heads of many distinguished tribes: for 'he also' Boothroyd reads 'they also,' viz. the Assyrian land force, and the naval power of Chittim, shall perish for ever. The Assyrian monarchy has already perished, so likewise have the Greek and poses, or annoying his people. What infinite knowledge is there in God! he perfectly discerns every circumstance of nations and persons, ages unnumbered, before there is the smallest appearance thereof. He sees all changes to the end, all the destruction and havock which sin will make in the world of one nation after another. But blessed be the Lord, who hath raised up a Horn of salvation in the house of his servant Ĵacob;—a Star to enlighten the Gentiles, and be the glory of his people Israel;—a Captain of salvation to go forth conquering and to conquer. But let me not dismiss this eastern sorcerer Balaam, with his high pretences to religion, his glorious speeches, and his noted intimacy with God, without seriously inquiring, What am I—what have l—what do I—what desire I—more than he?

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS. - If the devil's agents prevail not against the church one way, they will try another. But let us remember, that no enchantment can hurt us but that of our own lusts; that one sin leads to another; and that few temptations are more dangerons than the lustful love of women. If once the heart be ensnared, the miserable slave of lust and beauty may be enticed to anything sinful. Nothing more endangers the soul's final apostasy from Roman powers by which Eber (the Jews) was 'afflicted.' God than yielding to the solicitation of fleshly lusts: 17 Vex" the Midianites, and smite them:9

18 For they vex you with their *wiles, wherewith they have beguiled you in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi, the daughter of a prince of Midian, their sister, which was slain in the day of the plague for Peor's sake.

It is a Druse village, and is at the foot of Mount Hermon, near the place where, according to tradition, Christ was transfigured when Moses and Elias

It is true that Moses was not permitted to cross the Jordan, but it is a striking evidence of the truth that our career does not end with death that Moses, though buried on the other side of Jordan, appears upon this side during this crisis in our Lord's life, when before His disciples He seemed to hold back the veil that separates time from eternity, and disclosed the glories of the spiritual world.

OLUMN AND STATUE OF THE VIRGIN, NAZARETH—NEAR THE SITE OF THE HOME OF JOSEPH AND MARY. [Numbers, xxviii and xxix.]—In the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth chapters of Numbers we have the round of sacrifice daily, weekly, monthly, and annually drawn out in its fullness and symmetry. The sacrifices of the Old Testament combined regularity with variety; there was some sacrifice for every day, and for every week in its seventh day, and for every month in its first day, and for every year in its seventh month. Through these and their great festivals, all the interests and events of life were embraced, showing that the whole of life was to be consecrated to God. So Christ, who summed up all this meaning in His own life, died for us that it might be possible for all to make a perfect self-surrender to God. We give, to illustrate these two chapters, the column and statue of the Virgin at Nazareth, in the city of our Lord's boyhood.

But we may ask the infidel, Do you believe God to be the moral Lawgiver and Ruler of the world? If you deny, we cease to argue with the madness of atheism. But if God be acknowledged as the Lawgiver and Ruler, then has he not a right to enforce his own laws by appropriate penalties? Nature, as it is called—though surely nature is but another name for the will, laws, and government of God—nature has often swept away by earthquake, pestilence, or famine, her tens and hundreds of thousands; yet surely nature has not been arraigned for the deed! Why then should God be arraigned at the bar of proud and unholy infidelity for punishing a wicked people by the hand of man? See Jn. 12. 26.-Note, What an admonition does this equality of array suggest to churches! Some are few in number, and poor in worldly resources, but as God requires every one of his tribes to send its thousand to the war, so does he require each of his churches to make equal sacrifices to provide for his service, and equal exertions to bear witness to his truth. And true it is, for our encouragement, there are churches whose fewness in number, and poverty of means, have neither damped exertion nor denied success. C.]

what in this case is nature but the result of certain organic laws? and what are organic laws, but the result of God's will? So that we arrive, in spite of infidelity, at the point of God's will in the one case, and command in the other. If the infidel deny that death is the result of God's will, then he becomes an atheist, with whom it is generally vain to argue: for he who is mad enough to deny the being and government of a God, is certainly not sane enough to comprehend any rational argument. See Ps. 14. 1. The infidel' who in this case accuses the 'God of the Jews,' accuses, at the same time, the 'God of nature,' whom infidels, in general, pretend to acknowledge and worship, and whom, therefore, even upon their own principles, they dare not openly condemn. NTRANCE TO THE AMPHITHEATRE, PUTEOLI—NEAR WHERE ST. PAUL LANDED IN ITALY. [Numbers, xxxii:23.]—"But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the Lord: and be sure your sin will find you out." There is no truth better illustrated by the ruins of ancient cities than the one contained in the verse we quote above. In Egypt, in Assyria, in Greece, in Italy, the ruins of great cities teach in mute silence the truth that the sins of nations find nations out and the sins of individuals find individuals out. Before as are the melancholy runter of a great theatre that stood in Puteoli. Here men and beasts contended for one another's lives for the gratification of a depraved populace. This whole region overlooking the Bay of Naples is now practically deserted. It has been well said that there is no statute of limitation in regard to the debt of sin. Wherever a people disregard the plain laws of God written in nature and in the constitution of their own lives they must pay the penalty of a fearful doom.

MANY OF HIS WONDERFUL WORKS. [Numbers, xxxiv:11.]—"And the border shall descend and shall reach unto the side of the sea of Chinnereth eastward." We give this view of the monastery near Bethsaida, because it stands upon the side of the sea of Chinnereth, now called the Sea of Galilee. This monastery is near the city of Bethsaida, one of the towns in which Christ performed so many of his wonderful works and one of the towns upon which he pronounced a woe. We are looking here toward the east. We see the upper Gadarene country there beyond the Sea of Galilee, and the gradual falling of the country as it slopes toward the sea on the north. Tourists stop here and find good accommodations in this monastery. According to prophecy, it really has been more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon than for this place.

AMELS FEEDING AT NAZARETH—ON THE HILLS OVER WHICH CHRIST WALKED. [Numbers, xxxv:9-34.]—We give here a picture taken from a scene in Nazareth, the city of our Savior, to illustrate the cities of refuge referred to in the thirty-fifth chapter of Numbers. The cities of refuge may hardly be considered a type, but they constitute an illustration of Christ as the sinner's

Within the cities of refuge there was no condemnation, and so there is no safety for sinners except in Christ. To leave the city of refuge was to meet destruction, so we cannot go away from Christ but at the peril of our hopes. These camels were being taken from Syria into Egypt.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED

DEUTERONOMY.

This book is so called because it contains a repetition of many laws formerly delivered. It records the history of Israel doring one month before Moses' death, and another after it. Here we have scarcely any new history but what relates to Moses' renewal of the covenant between God and Israel, his charge to Joshua, and his death. Never, except in ch. 31. 14-21, and 34. 4, is God exhibited as speaking to Moses or the Israelites as in the three preceding books. But Moses, just going to leave them by death, in the most affecting manner rehearses to them what God had done for them; and the laws which he had given them, with several explications and additions. This rehearsal was extremely necessary and kind. (1) Many of the laws in respect of their matter, and all of them in respect of their Author and intent, were very important and worthy to be again and again inculcated. (2) The weakness of the Israelites made it necessary that the laws which immediately concerned them should be represented separately from those which concerned the priests and Levites. (3) The persons to whom these laws had been originally published were now almost all dead, and a new generation was grown up, to whom God would have his laws repeated by Moses himself, that, if possible, it might make a lasting impression upon them. (4) They were just going to take possession of Cansan; it was therefore proper that they should be expressly admonished of the conditions upon which they were to hold it. In this, his last speech and dying words, (1) Moses gives a summary rehearsal of what events had happened to them in the wilderness, ch. i. ii. iii.; 9. 7-29; 10. 1-7. (2) He rehearses the moral laws which had been given from Mount Sinai; and, by a variety of motives, drawn from the kindness of God towards them, and from the danger of disobedience, charges and calls upon them to obey them, iv.-xi. (3) With a mixture of moral institutes he inculcates manifold ceremonial and judicial observances: some of which, as of extirpating false prophets and idolatrous cities; making battlements round the roofs of houses; expiating uncertain murder; taking down hanged malefactors in the evening; punishing of rehellious children; distinguishing apparel of the sexes; marriage of captive women and wives of deceased brethren; of divorcing of wives and trial of virginity; of runaway servants, &c., had not before been plainly established, xii.-xxvi. (4) To enforce obedience to these laws, he charges them to surrender themselves solemnly to God at Ebal and Gerizzim as his dutiful servants, who regarded his blessings, and stood in awe of his curses. He solemnly announces the blessings annexed to their obedience, and denounces the curses which would befall them if disobedient, xxvii.-xxxi. (5) After encouraging Joshua his successor, and leaving a song for the people, warning them of their future sins, miseries, and deliverances, and a testamentary benediction for their encouragement, he views the promised land from Mount Pisgah, where he dies, and is buried by God, and lamented by the Israelites, xxxi.-xxxiv.

TOWER OF CASTLE—NEAR WHERE THE TRANSFIGURATION TOOK PLACE. [DRUT., i:7.]—Reference is made in this verse to Lebanon, and we give a picture of the great Subeibeh Castle, which stands about three miles above Cæsarea Philippi, at the foot of Mount Hermon, which belongs to the general Lebanon range. The top of this castle is 2,300 feet above the Mediterranean Sea and 1,000 feet above the town of Cæsarea Philippi. This is, perhaps, one of the largest castles in the world, and certainly the most massive fortification in all Syria. It is capable of accommodating a whole army, and stands here by the roadside overlooking the boundary between Syria and Palestine. Standing on the top of the tower, we are in sight of Dan, which is just below us, and which marked the northern limit of the Holy Land. This castle is in a state of remarkable preservation, which is probably owing to the quality of the stone, which is very compact and hard as adamant.

NCIENT WALL OF ACROPOLIS—ONE OF THE OLDEST RELICS IN ATHENS. [DRUT., ii: 1-23.]—In the first part of the above chapter we have some account of international relationships. A careful study of the Old Testament Scriptures reveals the truth that while the Hebrews were God's peculiar people they were not His only people. All peoples were His, and every nation contemporary with the Jews was raised up for some specific purpose. Greece was far away over the Mediterranean Sea from Palestine, but with a history contemporaneous with that of the Hebrews after their entrance into the promised land under Joshua. The heroic period of Greek history is said to date from B. C. 1400 to B. C. 1200. We give in the above picture an illustration of an aucient, rugged, and ragged relic of the old wall built on the northern side of the Acropolis in Athens. The Chinnereth referred to in the 17th verse of the third chapter of Deuteronomy is Lake Galilee which we see through this gate of entrance into the city of Tiberias. ## CHAPTER V.

1 A commemoration of the covenant in Horeb, 6 the ten command-ments. 22 At the people's request Moses receiveth the law from God.

ND Moses called "all Israel," and said unto  $m{A}$  them,  ${}^{b} ext{Hear}$ , O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep and do <sup>2</sup>them.

2 The LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

3 The Lord amade not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.3

4 The Lord talked with you face to face in the mount, out of the midst of the fire,

5 (I stood between the Lord and you at that time, to show you the word of the Lord: for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount,) saying,

6 ¶ Ig am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.4

7 Thou<sup>h</sup> shalt have none other gods before

8 Thou shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth:

9 Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: *for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me,

10 And showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my command-

11 Thou<sup>m</sup> shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

IRJATH JEARIM—WHERE THE ARK OF THE COVENANT RESTED IN THE HOUSE OF ABINADAB. [Deut., v. 22.]—"These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more; and he wrote them in two tables of stone and delivered them unto me." We give here a picture of Kirjath Jearim because when the ark of the testimony was brought from Bethshemesh it rested in this place in the house of Abinadab. The immeasurable distance of the religion of Israel from that of surrounding nations may be determined from the fact that the Israelite bowed himself before a holy place in which God was represented in His law and as revealing Himself as holy and just and demanding corresponding traits in His people. The Egyptian bowed before a shrine also, but when that which was contained in it was disclosed it was seen to be a cat or a crocodile or some animal lower in nature than man. The Israelite looked above him, the Egyptian looked beneath himself.

OSQUE OF OMAR AND TURKISH QUARTER, JERUSALEM—IN THE PLACE OF THE TEMPLE WHERE CHRIST TAUGHT. [Deut., v: 33.]—"Ye shall walk in all that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess." We give a picture here, as illustrating the results of failing to observe God's law, the Mosque of Omar, a Mohammedan place of worship standing on the very site of the magnificent temple built by the people of God. Every Jew and every Christian who makes a visit to Palestine resents in his own feelings the presence of an alien people in the land of the Hebrews and of Christians. But we are all forced to admit that this land would have belonged to Jews and Christians forever had they been to the ten commandments and to the Son of God, the embodiment of the ten commandments in living form.

God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm: therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath-day.

OSQUE EL-AKSA, WITH BASIN—WHERE OUR SAVIOR HELD THE CONVERSATION WITH THE LAWYER. [Deut., vi: 4-10.]—Upon one occasion the law. The language our Savior used in replying to this lawyer is found in this sixth chapter of Deuteronomy between the fourth and tenth verses. We give a picture of the Mosque el-Aksa which stands upon part of the grounds once occupied by the temple, and is doubtless near the spot where our Savior stood when he held the conversation with the lawyer. The language used in this part of Deuteronomy is made more sacred because it was quoted by our Savior during his temptation in the wilderness. The Mosque el-Aksa is not far from the Mosque of Omar. North of the Gothic porch of the mosque is a marble fountain called the cup, and beneath this fountain is a very large reservoir or basin into which it is said the water from the Pools of Solomon were once conveyed.

LL athe commandments which I command A thee this day shall ye observe to do, that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the Lord sware unto your fathers.

Our Lord quotes these words in answer to the temptation of Satan Mat. iv., exciting him to command 'stones to be made bread.' They contain three important facts: (1) That man is naturally supported by food. (2) That the production of food, and the power of digestion and nutrition, greatly and mainly depend upon the 'word of God.' The truth of —"Hear, O Israel; Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, cities great, and feuced up to heaven."

We give here a picture of the natives crossing the Jordan in a ferry-boat. The manner of crossing illustrated above, however, was totally different from the way the children of Israel crossed that river under the leadership of Joshua. They forded it. There are a great many fords in the river. Dr. George Adam Smith describes the Jordan as a rapid, muddy water with zigzag curves, and the depth varying from ten to twelve feet in the sixty-five miles of descent. The descent is 610 feet from the sea of Galilee and is sometimes over forty feet a mile. Jordan means down-comer.

Notwith-standing all the sufferings and persecutions they endured in Egypt, God blessed them with such increase as had never been known. REEK CHURCH, NAZARETH—NEAR ST. MARY'S WELL. [DEUT., x:12-22.]—"And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul," etc. Above we have a picture of the Greek Church in Nazareth, the city of our Savior. This can be very aptly placed in connection with this portion of the Word of God concerning the importance of the Law, for without Jesus Christ the Law cannot be obeyed, for "what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit." The Greek Church in Nazareth is just above St. Mary's Well, where the Mother of Jesus often came to draw water.

[Deut., xi:31.]—"For ye shall pass over Jordan, to go in to possess the land which the Lord your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein." The particular bridge illustrated in the picture is over the Hasbany prong of the Jordan. It is called the Bridge of Jacob's Daughters. It is three miles from Dan, and on the direct road from Jerusalem to Damascus. The Jordan as we see it in the picture is very wild because of the deep gorge through which it dashes down. The banks on either side are lined with oleanders, willows, honey-suckles and other sweet and flowering shrubs. The noise of the water, and the charming scent of the flowers, together with the natural scene combine to make this place romantic and beautiful. The bridge is very old, and is assigned by tradition to the time of the Romans.

[Deut., xiv: 21.]—"And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the Lord thy God." All the sacrifices and offerings made to God in the Old Testament history of the church were types of the sinless One who was to come, and who was to bear in his own body the sins of the whole world. # CHAPTER XVIII.

1 The Lord is the priests' and Levites' inheritance. 3 The priest's due. 6 The Levite's portion. 9 The abominations of the nations are to be avoided. 15 Christ the prophet is to be heard. 20 The presumptuous prophet is to die.

THE priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they shall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance.

2 Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren; the Lord is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them.

3  $\P$  And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a csacrifice, whether it be ox or sheep; and they shall give unto the priest the shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw.

4 The d first-fruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the first of the fleece of thy sheep, shalt thou give him.

5 For the Lord thy God hath chosen him out of all thy tribes, to stand to minister in the name of the Lord, him and his sons for ever.

6 ¶ And if a Levite come from any of thy gates out of all Israel, where he sojourned, and come with all the desire of his mind unto the place which the Lord shall choose;

7 Then he shall minister in the name of the LORD his God, <sup>9</sup>as all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the LORD.

worship of God, to copy after the example of wicked and idolatrous men; his worship is pure and spiritual; he regards not the external appearance; but they who worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth.

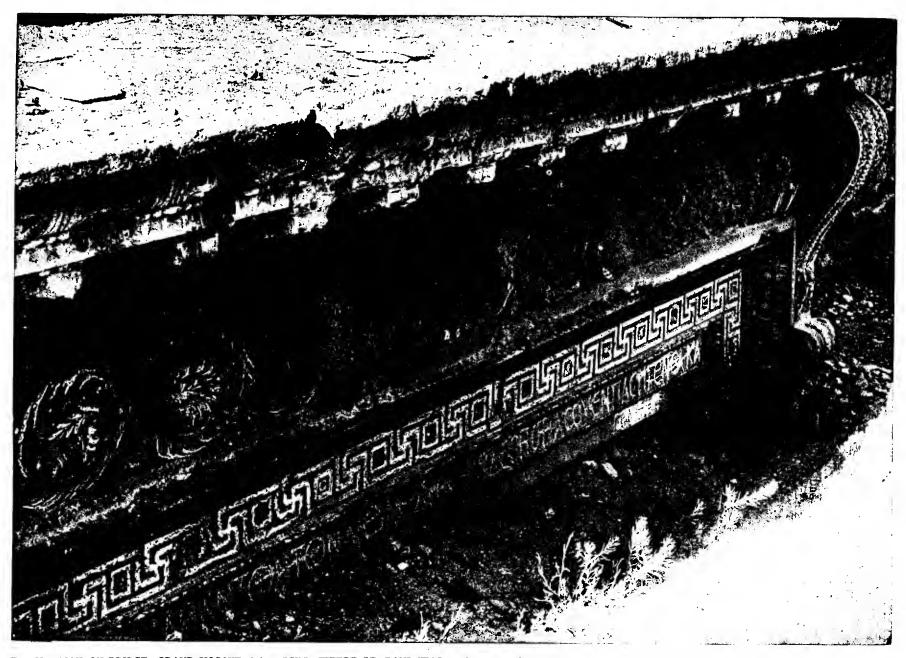

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 12. At first sight this seems a hard law, and even cruel, that the person who should object to or fail to carry out the sentence of priest or judge in any civil case should be put to death. It would have been both unjust and cruel had the priest been a mere temporal ruler; but he was the commissioned minister of God, and it is implied here that in cases of great difficulty and delicacy, such as those referred to, he should ask counsel of God. God, therefore, was the real judge in the case; and a refusal to submit to his judgment was treason against heaven. P.]

Ver. 14. [I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me. Moses, foreseeing by the prophetic spirit that the tide in popular opinion would one day turn in favour of monarchy, so far from pronouncing any authoritative opinion concerning theoretical forms of government, addresses himself, by divine direction, to propound the true maxims and principles of all government. And when the period foreseen by Moses arrived, and the people demanded and remarkable integrity. But dangerous is it, in the | as possible, that others may hear and fear. But, in matters of life and death, nothing less than the clearest evidence should be admitted. Great care must be taken at once to maintain the just rights of subjects and the lawful authority of magistrates: and we must obey, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake. To rebel against the lawful orders of government is to commit treason against the majesty of heaven. But, in order to secure respect to their government, magistrates ought to be deliberately set up: they ought to avoid whatever gratifies their lust or tends to corrupt them. God's word should be the supreme standard of their determinations. Piety, prudence, humble con-descension, and equity should run through the whole of their conduct. No day should pass without reading of God's word. The fear of God powerfully induces to an obedience to his commands. And the higher our station is, the more exemplary and humble our conversation ought to be. Religion is the best security of thrones, and every other honour: and even in this world there is a great reward in keeping God's commandments.

This is the most probable meaning, and includes every form of threatened injury to person or property from what is called an evil eye. -An enchanter. A pretended diviner by serpents, or the positions and movements of other animals. -A witch. One who resorts to charms, &c., for the injury of another.—A charmer. Thus, the Pythoness at Delphi, in Greece, pretended to be inspired by Apollo. - Wizard. 'A cunning man,' one who pretended to know secret things, past, present, or future. - Necromancer. One who pretended to consult or raise the dead, as the word signifies. -All these pretended arts are the products of ignorance, the nurses of superstition, and the forerunners and CHAPTER XVIII. INSCRIPTION ON BRIDGE, GRAND MOSQUE, DAMASCUS—WHERE ST. PAUL WAS CONVERTED. [Deut., xviii:15-19.]—"The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken." The prophet referred to in this verse is the Lord Jesus Christ. He was the one who was to come in the fullness of time, who, according to Isaiah, was to be called the Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, and who was to sit upon the throne of David, and upon h s kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment, and with justice from henceforth even forever. How strange that upon the Grand Mosque in Damascus we should find written in Greek on the hridge: "Thy kingdom, O Christ, is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations." The Grand Mosque, an illustration of which we give above, is the most famous place of Mahommedan worship in Damascus.

So this picture of the Virgin's Fountain in Nazareth, where Christ grew up, is a good illustration of that spirit of humanity and good will and biessing we see emphasized in Christ.

ARDEN IN SECOND STORY OF MUSEUM—PALACE OF A MODERN PHARAOH OF EGYPT. [Drut, xxvi: 6.]—"And the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage." The disposition of the reigning classes in Egypt to oppress the toiling masses and to afflict them with hard bondage continues unto this day to be a characteristic of the rulers here. This great palace of Gizeh, built by Ismail-Pasha at a cost of about $25,000,000, literally represents so much wealth extracted from the poor laboring people of Egypt. Ismail-Pasha put upon the Egyptian government the enormous debt of $500,000,000. The people so grouned under the burden of debt that the powers at Constantinople were forced to depose him, and to confiscate his landed properties and residences. The view above given represents a scene in the garden of the second story of this palace known as the Harem Garden. There the young flowerets with sweet perfume blow,

There every evening comes the after-glow,

[Drut, xxvi: 19.]—"And to make thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honor; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the Lord thy God, as he hath spoken." We give a view above of the arches found on the area once occupied by Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem. The temple as it stood upon this same spot was the center of the Jewish race, and to-day the Mosque of Omar that stands in its place is the pride and ornament of the city of Jerusalem. As God promised he did make of the Hebrews the highest of the nations of ancient times, and the city of Jerusalem the capital of the religion of humanity. And though the Holy City has been subjected to reverses one after another for thousands of years, it continues to be the most interesting city as far as its historic associations go to be found on the face of the globe.

XTERIOR OF AMPHITHEATRE, PUTEOLI—THE PLACE OF NERO'S GREAT CRIMES. [Deut., xxvii: 1.]—"And Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day." The commandments which the Israelites were to keep were not arbitrary enactments imposed by the God of Moses and their God upon them alone. They were really the laws ordained for the government of the human race. The God of the Jew is the God of all mankind, and the God of the human conscience. And as cog corresponds with cog in the mechanical wheel, so the Mosaic law corresponds to the conscience of mankind. The Jews suffered national weakness and lost the high place intended for them in the mind of God because they violated these plain laws, revealed through Moses and affirmed by the very structure of human nature. We give a picture of the exterior of the Amphitheatre at Puteoli which serves to illustrate the fact that not only among the Jews, but among the Gentiles also, degradation and ruin come to the people who dare to transgress the simple laws of God.

ENERAL VIEW OF THE FORUM—WHERE ST. PAUL WAS imprisoned. [Drut., xxviii:20.]—"The Lord shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke in all that thou settest thy hand unto to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me." Perhaps a general view of the Forum in Rome could not more fitly represent any portion of Scripture than that part contained in the verse above quoted. The cursing, vexation, and lebuke leferred to above were to come upon the Jews, but wickedness brings cursing and destruction no less upon the other nations. There is no better place on the face of the earth to study the relation of penalty to violated law than the Roman Forum. It is the very heart and center of that mighty empire that came to a terrible ending because of its sins against the laws of God and of itself.

2 Moses exhorteth the people to obedience, by the memory of the works they had seen. 10 All are presented before the Lord to enter into his covenant. 18 The great wrath on him that flattereth himself in his wickedness. 29 Secret things belong unto God.

  7 And when ye came unto this place, Sihon the king of Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, came out against us unto battle, and we smote them:

  8 And we took their land, and gave it for an inheritance unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh.

  9 Keeph therefore the words of this covenant, and do them, that ye may prosper in all that ye do.

  10 ¶ Yei stand this day all of you before the Lord your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel, 24 Even all nations shall say, Wherefore hath the Lord done thus unto this land? wha meaneth the heat of this great anger?

25 Then men shall say, dBecause they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt:

26 For they went and served other gods, and worshipped them, gods whom they knew not, and whom he had not given unto them.8

27 And the anger of the Lord was kindled against this land, to bring upon it all the curses that are written in this book:

N THE QUAY, SMYRNA—A CITY WHERE GOD'S ANCIENT PEOPLE HAVE GREAT INFLUENCE AND WHERE THEY LIVE IN GREAT NUMBERS. [Deut., xxix:28.]—"And the Lord rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day." We give a picture of the quay at Smyrna because it serves to illustrate the declaration in this verse of Deuteronomy. Perhaps there is no city in the world of the same number of inhabitants where the Jews, rooted out of their own land and cast into another, have come to greater positions of influence, at least in a mercantile way, than in Smyrna. The great carpet houses here, which supply the world's market with Turkish rugs and other fine carpet fabrics, are owned by Jews. Smyrna is a city of over 200,000 inhabitants, and the quay of Smyrna is the street that extends for a mile or more along the harbor, and is the most important in the city.

REEK CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, NAZARETH—IN THE CITY OF MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS. [DEUT., xxx: 1-10.]—"And it shall come to pass, when all things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the Lord thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto the Lord thy God * * * that then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee." We give above a picture of the Greek Church of Annunciation because the Scripture quoted above was not fulfilled until the coming of Christ. The angel said to Mary, as recorded in the first chapter of St. Luke, speaking of Jesus, He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the H ghest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end

Corinth is another striking illustration of the ruin that comes to cities and peoples who violate the laws of God first given to the Jews, but really as applicable to other nations as to the people whom God raised up to teach these laws. Corinth was once a splendid and wealthy city, the center of art and luxury. But upon the top of this very mountain, enclosed by the wall as shown above, there was a temple of Venus dedicated to licentiousness. So nothing is left of this city to-day except moldering ruins. REFLECTIONS.—In the most serious and solemn | his judgments of desertion, sword, famine, or pestilmanner ought ministers to deliver the truths of God to their people; and terrible will be the judgment of despisers of them, when both heaven and earth shall witness against them. How great, how unalterable, how faithful, holy, and just is God! and how perfect, wise, and righteous are all his works! But how ungrateful, disobedient, and apostatizing are many of his professed children! It is necessary, therefore, to ponder both the character of God and our own, to prevent our

But his mercy waits long: he is unwilling to inflict judgments on his people, and to give his enemies any cause of triumph over them, even when they have provoked him to the most shocking degree; and earnestly he wills that their serious consideration should prevent their ruin. and king in Jeshurun-till I consider him as a noted | figure of my infinitely more glorious and useful Redeemer. He was a proper, a divine child, early and often exposed to danger. O the exile, the reproach, the contradiction of sinners, the persecution even unto death, which he endured! and how divine his support under his unnumbered trials! How amiable his qualities !-his contempt of the world, in its pleasures, honours, or riches-his compassion and tender regard to his injurious brethren-his amazing meekness-his distinguished fidelity-his prudence, boldness, and holy zeal! Solemn and express was his call to his work; and, by a multitude of miracles in favour of his people, and with the most tremendous destruction of his Jewish, heathen, Antichristian, and other enemies, has that call been confirmed. Extensive is the office to which God has appointed him. He is the Almighty Deliverer, who rescues us from the worse than Egypt-

vider, who bestows upon us spiritual entertainment, | speaks as never man did. He is the brightness of his hidden manna, living water, and unchanging robes of righteousness. He is the Leader given to the people, who opens a safe passage through every Red Sea of difficulty; and by power and prayer subdues every opposer, and brings us not merely to the borders, but to the full enjoyment of our promised, evangelical, spiritual, and eternal rest. Nor can their murmuring unbelief or rebellion ever provoke him to forsake those who have been given to him by his Father. He is the Mediator between God and men, with whom the promise of grace is made; and who confirms it with all by the shedding and sprinkling of his blood. He had his Father's law in his heart, fulfilled it for us, and gives it to us as our rule. He not only fasted and prayed, but died for a stiff-necked and rebellious people. He infallibly prevents our utter rejection. He is the incomparable Prophet, who knows the full mind of ian slavery of sin, Satan, and the world; and of God, and can teach us by the Holy Ghost sent down with him were buried all the ancient ceremonies, the Father's glory, and the express image of his person, which we can behold, and he familiar with, only as veiled with our nature. He is our glorious Priest, who shed his blood, and sprinkled it or .he altar, to fulfill JEHOVAH's justice; and on the book of the law as a command, fulfilling it in our stead; and he sprinkles it on the people's conscience, to purge them from dead works to serve the living God. He authorizes all the true ministers of the church, and consecrates the saints as spiritual priests, and all the ordinances thereof, unto the service of God. He is King and Lawgiver to his Israel indeed, appointing the whole form and ordinances of his church; and to him is the whole government thereof committed by God. His whole life was remarkable for fidelity in the service of God, and his death was marvellous and voluntary. His grave was appointed of God; but in it he saw no corruption; and heathenism and error. He is the all-sufficient Pro- from heaven, and make us wise unto salvation. He law as a covenant, and the sins of all who believe.

BOOK OF JOSHUA.

This book represents God's fulfilment of his promises to the patriarchs and their descendants, in giving them the land of Canaan; and the fulfilment of Noah's curse upon Canaan, in the destruction and slavery of his descendants. It relates what was transacted by Joshus as governor of Israel; particularly how God confirmed his call and encouraged him to his work; his sending spies to view Jericho; the miraculous passage through Jordan, and erecting memorials of it; his sanctification of the people hy their circumcision and eating the passover, i.-v.; his miraculous conquest of Jericho, and severe punishment of Achan's theft of the spoil, vi. vii.; his conquest of Bethel and Ai, and league with the Giheonites, viii. ix.; his conquest of the south part of Canaan, and causing the sun to stand still, x.; his conquest of the northern parts of that country, xi.; an account of Canaan, xii.-xiv.; his division of it to the nine tribes and a half; his appointment of cities of refuge and of cities to the Levites, xv.-xxi.; his kind dismission of the Reubenites and Gadites, xxii.; his solemn admonitions to the people, and renewal of their covenant with God; and, in fine, his death and burial, xxiii. xxiv.

[In addition to its sacred interest, the book of Joshus is one of the most ancient and important geographical and ethnological treatises extant. In giving an account of Joshua's conquests the historian sketches briefly, but with a master's hand, the leading physical features of the country, its topography, and the characteristics of the principal tribes by which it was then held. The licentious inhabitants of Jericho, the hardy mountaineers of Ai, the wily Gibeonites, the warlike Jebusites, the trained hosts of Jabin and his allies who swept the northern plains in chariots of iron, are all passed in rapid review before the eye of the reader. Then with a geographical accuracy and minuteness of detail altogether unparalleled in ancient literature, the houndaries of the allotted territories of the twelve tribes are defined, and their principal towns enumerated. Most of the houndary lines can still be traced, and many of the old cities identified. The book of Joshna thus forms an invaluable hand-book to the ancient topography of Palestine. The list of kings or chiefs, whose cities and territories were conquered by Moses and Joshua, is also of very great importance; and there are several episodes in the book which throw light upon certain remarkable localities and peoples: such as the story of the conquest of Hebron and its giant inhabitants of the race of Anak by Caleb; the capture of Kirjath-sepher, 'the town of books,' by Othniel; and the petition of Ahssh, Csleb's daughter, 'Give me also springs of water.' These, with others of a similar character, tend to give a primeval history something of the vivid colouring of a life-picture. P.]

CHAPTER IV.

1 Twelve men are appointed to take twelve stones for a memorial out of Jordan. 9 Twelve other stones are set up in the midst of Jordan. 10, 19 The people pass over. 14 God magnifieth Joshua. 20 The twelve stones are pitched in Gilgal.

ND it came to pass, when all the people A were clean passed over Jordan, that the Lord spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Take b you twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man;

3 And command ye them, saying, Take you hence out of the midst of Jordan, out of the place where the priests' feet stood firm, 'twelve stones; and ye shall carry them over with you, and leave them in the lodging-place where ye shall lodge this night.

4 Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had eprepared of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man;

5 And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the Lord your God 'into the midst of Jordan, and take you up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel;

From this lake it pursues its course, still southerly, through a dreary valley till it empties itself into the Dead Sea. The whole course, computing the windings of the stream, is about 160 miles. Travellers differ greatly as to its width; but from the average it may be estimated at about 90 feet. That it formerly overflowed its banks the Scriptures assert, ver. 15; 1 Ch. 12. 15; this some travellers deny. No rational man can doubt the Scripture statement, and recent researches prove it to be strictly accurate. That it rises an average of about culties attending it. Jericho-the river rises over these banks and floods the channel flows. The priests bearing the ark could, without any danger, dip their feet in the water which overflowed the banks. The opening of a passage through the river at such a season was the greater miracle. Had it been late in the summer it might have been thought that natural causes operated; but in harvest-the time of the overflow-the finger of God must have been manifest to all. P.]

REFLECTIONS .- Let us always press forward in the way of our duty, notwithstanding foreseen diffiCanaan above. If then I expect a noted appearance of God for my relief, let me make solemn preparation for it, separating myself from every sinful lust and carnal care. Always seeking the honour which cometh from above, let me improve God's present manifestations of power and love as pledges of more, nay, of eternal and immediate enjoyment of him. Let no occasional advantage, gained by the opposition made to my happiness, or to the church of God, dismay me; for the Lord sits King upon the floods, and is mightier than the noise of many waters.

A NCIENT JERICHO — WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL FIRST CAMPED. [Joshua, iv:19.]—"And the people came up out of Jordan on the tenth day of the first month and encamped in Gilgal, in the east border of Jericho." Jericho is a city of great antiquity. It is situated in what is called the plain of the Jordan, and is consequently over against the ford of the river where, under the leadership of Joshua, the Israelites crossed. It is about 6 miles west of the Jordan and about 8 miles northwest of the Dead Sea. It once had a king, and its walls were so wide that houses were built upon them. Here the sons of the prophet sought retirement from the world. The city rose to great influence during the reign of Herod, who had his residence here. He fortified it and built many palaces, which he named after his friends. Here he died, and it was in the amphitheater of Jericho that the news of his death was announced to the assembled soldiers and people by Salome.

THE CHURCH AT GILGAL—WHERE THE ISRAELITES KEPT THE FIRST PASSOVER IN THE PROMISED LAND. [Joshua, v:10.]—"And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even in the plains of Jericho." This was the site of the first camp of the Israelites after they crossed over the river Jordan, the place at which they passed the first night in the Promised Land, and where the 12 stones were set up which had been taken from the bed of the stream. In the above view we have a picture of a church built by the Greek Christians. This is perhaps the most interesting building between the Judean mountains and the River Jordan. This is about 20 miles from Jerusalem, and to reach it one makes a descent of 3800 feet over the rockiest and roughest road perhaps in Christendom. There are many ruins found in this plain, but the Judean hills overlooking it are the same that they were when Joshua encamped here with the children of Israel.

20  $\P$  So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that "the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city.

21 And they vutterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword.6

22  $\P$  But Joshua had said unto the two men that had spied out the country, Go into the harlot's house, and bring out thence the woman, and all that she hath, as ye sware unto her.

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had; and they brought out all her 'kindred, and left them awithout the camp of Israel.8

24 And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: only bthe silver, and the gold, and the vessels of brass and of iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the LORD.

25 And Joshua saved Rahab the harlot alive. and her father's household, and all that she had; and she dwelleth in Israel even unto this 9day; because she hid the messengers which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho.

26 ¶ And Joshua dadjured them at that time, saying, 'Cursed be the man before the Lord that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho: he shall lay the foundation thereof in his firstborn, and in his youngest son shall he set up the gates of it.

27 So the Lord was with Joshua; and his game was noised throughout all the country.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Achan's trespass. 2 The Israelites are smitten at Ai. 6 Joshwa's complaint. 10 God instructeth him what to do. 16 Achan is taken by the lot. 19 His confession. 24 He and all he had are destroyed in the ralley of Achor.

DUT the achildren of Israel committed a tres-D pass in the accursed thing: for 2Achan the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took of the baccursed thing: and the anger of the LORD was kindled against the children of Israel.

2 ¶ And Joshua sent men from Jericho to mountain cham, commanding a noble wiew of the Jordan valley. It is about a Ai, which is beside Beth-aven, on the east tween them lies and between them lies and between them lies of Bethel, and spake unto them, saving. unto him, Let not all the people go up; but let about two or three thousand men4 go up and smite Ai, and make not all the people to labour thither; for they are but few.5

- 4 So there went up thither of the people about three thousand men; and they 'fled before the men of Ai.
- 5 And the men of Ai smote of them about thirty and six men: for they chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and smote them in the going down: wherefore the hearts of the people melted,<sup>7</sup> and became as water.

6 ¶ And Joshua *rent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face before the ark of the Lord until the even-tide, he and the elders of Israel, and 'put dust upon their heads.

- 7 And Joshua said, Alas, O Lord God, wherefore hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us? "Would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side Jordan!
- 8 O Lord, what shall I say, when Israel turneth their backs<sup>8</sup> before their enemies!
- 9 For the Canaanites, and all the inhabitants of the land, shall hear of it, and pshall environ us round, and cut off our name from the earth: and qwhat wilt thou do unto thy great name?
- 10 ¶ And the Lord said unto Joshua, Get thee up; "wherefore liest" thou thus upon thy face?
- 11 Israel *hath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them: for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and dissembled also, and they have put it even among their own stuff.

12 Therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because they were accursed; neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you.

13 Up, "sanctify the people, and say, Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow; for thus saith the LORD God of Israel, *There is an acsaith the LORD God of Israel, *There is an actual recise cursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel: thou canst not stand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accursed thing from among you.

MOUNT EBAL—WHERE JOSHUA BUILT AN ALTAR. [Joshua, viii: 30.]—
"Then Joshua built an altar unto the Lord God of Israel in Mount Ebal."
The traveler in passing from Jerusalem northward to Nazareth comes to the entrance of the valley between Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal at Jacob's well. These mountains so come together as to form a natural amphitheater. Mount Ebal forms the northern side of the fertile valley in which ancient Shechem was situated. It rises to a height of 2986 feet. Upon this mountain the curse for disobedience to the law was pronounced, while the blessing for obedience was given from Mount Gerizim. Its modern Arabic name is Jebel Eslamiyah. This is from a female saint whose tomb is standing on the eastern part of the ridge a little before the highest point is reached. The acoustic properties of the valley between the two mountains have been tested, and it is said that a man's voice uttered in the valley can be distinctly heard across the amphitheater formed here by the two mountains

The meaning of this name is "place of gazelles." It is a broad and beautiful valley near the city of Ajalon. It is about 14 miles from Jerusalem. Ajalon was a Levitical city of Dan. It was also one of the cities of refuge, and the city doubtless stood in this noted valley. The modern name of Ajalon is Galo, which is situated on a long hill on the south side of the valley whose name it bears. On the ridge above this valley the Mediterranean and the plain of Sharon are in full view. Going up above it we find dwarf oaks, arbutus and other shrubs, with plantations of olive and carob trees. ↑ ND it came to pass, when Jabin king of A aHazor had heard those things, that he bent to Jobab king of Madon, and to the king of Shimron, and to the king of Achshaph,

2 And to the kings that were on the north of the mountains, and of the plains south of <sup>a</sup>Chinneroth, and in the valley, and in the borders of Dor on the west;

4 And they went out, they and all their hosts with them, much people, even has the sand that is upon the sea-shore in multitude, with horses and chariots very many.

5 And when all these kings were met together,2 they came and pitched together at the waters of Merom, to fight against Israel.

6 ¶ And the Lord said unto Joshua, Be not afraid because of them; for to-morrow, about this time, will I deliver them up all slain before Israel: thou 'shalt hough their horses, and burn their chariots with fire.

7 So Joshua came, and all the people of war with him, against them by the waters of "Merom suddenly, and they fell upon them.

ASTLE AT CESAREA PHILIPPI—NEAR HAZOR, KING JABIN'S CAPITAL. [JOSHUA, xi:1-20.]—Only a little distance from this castle, Thomson learned of a very old ruin, which is thought to be the relic of the ancient capital of Jabin, king of Hazor, which was the chief city before the time of Joshua, of all the northern basin of the Jordan. In the eleventh chapter of Joshua we have an account of the battle of Israel with this king. We learn also from this chapter that 1,451 B. C., this Jabin, king of Hazor, had chariots and horses in his army. The great Subebeh castle is a mile in circumference. It is about three miles from Cæsarea Philippi and fifteen hundred feet above it. From the top of its towers there is an extensive and charming prospect. The castle is guarded on all sides by inaccessible gorges and only on the northeast is the hill upon which it stands connected with the main body of the earth.

8 And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them ounto great Zidon, and unto Mizrephoth-maim, and unto the valley of Mizpeh eastward; and they smote them, until they left them none remaining.

9 And Joshua did unto them as the Lord bade him: he phoughed their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire.

10 ¶ And Joshua at that time turned back, and took Hazor, and smote the king thereof the sword; for Hazor beforetime was the sword; for Hazor beforetime was the swerd in the sword; for Hazor beforetime was the swerd in the sword; for Hazor beforetime was the swerd in the sword; for Hazor beforetime was the swerd in the sword; for Hazor beforetime was the swerd in the sword; for Hazor beforetime was the swerd in the swerd in the sword; for Hazor beforetime was the swerd in the swer them ounto great Zidon,3 and unto 4Mizre-

12 And all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them, did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword; and he utterly destroyed them, 'as Moses, the servant of the Lord, commanded.

REFLECTIONS.—How madly do sinners rush headlong into ruin, notwithstanding repeated warnings by the destruction of others! The strength and multitude of their confederacy do but make their ruin the more notorious. But the greater the dangers which surround his people, the greater supports should they ask and expect from God: and the more entirely their heart is fixed on him as their strength, the more certainly shall their spiritual enemies be subdued before them. That to which sinners flee for help is often but a trap to ensnare them: and their destruction is certain, though sometimes slow; and always just and wise, however severe: the most powerful not excepted.

ACE OF FREIGHT BOATS, JAFFA. THE SEAPORT TOWN OF JERUSALEM IN TIME OF SOLOMON, AND FROM HIS DAY TO THE PRESENT. [JOSHUA, xiii:2.]—"This is the land that et remaineth: all the borders of the Philistines, and all Geshuri." We give this illustration here because Jaffa was a city of Philistia. Palestine is said to have originally meant the district inhabited by the Philistines. Philistia embraced the coast plain on the southwest of Palestine, extending from Jaffa on the north to the valley of Gera on the south, and from the Mediterranean on the west to the foot of the Judean hills on the east. The picture we give above is of a scene which will be very familiar to all tourists who have ever landed at Jaffa. As soon as ever the great steamers anchor out in the sea the little boats from the shore begin a race to see which can reach the steamer first. Happy is the traveler if his arrangements for landing have been made previously

TIBERIAS—THE ANCIENT RAKKATH, ONCE THE CAPITAL OF THE PROVINCE OF GALILEE. [JOSHUA, xix: 35.]—"And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Hammath, Rakkath, and Chinnereth." According to the Talmud, the city of Rakkath once stood upon the site now occupied by Tiberias. In the fourth century the Jews dropped the name of Tiberias and called the city by its ancient name of Rakkath. Herod Antipas built the Roman city and called it after the name of the emperor, Tiberias. It became the capital of the province of Galilee in which our Savior grew up, and was fortified by Josephus during the wars of the Jews. After the fall of Jerusalem, Tiherias was selected by the Sanhedrin as their headquarters. After that it became a principal seat of Jewish learning. Many of the most eminent Jewish rabbis connected with the history of the race lived and died here.

1 Never was there recorded a finer spe-cinen of gentle, honest, manly, elo-quent, gody diplom-acy; and the gener-city with which it was accompanied with the second the tribes rebelled against the Lord, must have demon-strated the sincerity and good-will with which the ambassa-duction were actuated.

15 And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,1

16 Thus saith the twhole congregation of the LORD, What trespass is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to "turn away this day from following the Lord, in that ye have builded you an altar, that ye might rebel this day against the Loro?

River Jordan in the Scripture, as a boundary. It was the limit of the Holy Land on the eastern side. The Jordan has several sources near Cæsarea Philippi. It passes through the lakes of Merom and Galilee. Two remarkable features about the Jordan are its descent and its windings. Between the Lake Galilee and the Dead Sea there are 2 rapids. At Lake Galilee the river is 653 feet beneath sea level, and at the Dead Sea it is 1316 feet beneath sea level.

25 So Joshua made a covenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinance in Shechem.

26 ¶ And Joshua wrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone, and set it up there under an oak that was by the sanctuary of the Lord.

27 And Joshua said unto all the people, Behold, this stone shall be a witness unto us;

7 So long as ye retain your secret hankering after idolatry, 'ye cannot serve the Lord, simply because 'no man can serve two masters. — C.

Upon the expression 'before God' the idea of the presence of the ark at Shechem is founded. The subsequent use of the phrase, and which in Scripture is generally the best resource of interpreters, does not warrant this conclusion. See Ac. 10. 33. C.]

Ver. 23. [Put away, said he, the strange gods which are among you. We cannot too often repeat our astonishment at the obstinate adherence of Israel to idolatry; nor too carefully draw the comparison between Jews and Christians in this point of view. Idolatry is a pliant sin, and can take many forms. The idolatry of the understanding—the idolatry of the imagination the idolatry of the passions, are forms more common, and therefore less noticed, but not therefore less real nor less hateful in the sight of God, than the idolatry hill, stands the tomb of Eleazar, with a cave beside it, of the senses. He that places upon any object one particle of the love he owes to God, is as much an idolater as he who bows down to the sun, or worships a beast or an image of wood or stone. C.]

Ver. 26. [The word 'there' must necessarily refer to the place named immediately before; that is, Shechem, where the assembly was held and the covenant made. We may therefore conclude that the ark and tabernacle had been removed temporarily from Shiloh and set up at Shechem. There is, however, another probable explanation given by Masius:—'I think that that their last breath in the service of God, and manifesting spot is called the Sanctuary of God which was the first in all Canaan to be consecrated by Abraham, when he is like their death. Marvellous and gracious erected an altar and offered worship by the tree which | are the transactions of God with respect to his people:

Ver. 32. [The bones of Joseph. The entire stream of history bears records of the tomb of Joseph. It is mentioned by Jerome, and continues to be pointed out to every modern traveller. It is now a Turkish oratory, with a whitened dome. It lies in the opening of the valley of Shechem, between the mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, and only a few hundred yards north of Jacob's Well. C. and P.]

Ver. 33. [About 5 miles south-east of Nabulus, on the side of the ridge which bounds the upland plain of Mukhna on the east, stands the village of Awertah. In it is the traditional tomb of Phinehas, surrounded by a rude wall, and partially covered by the branches of a great vine. Some distance from the village, on a to which the name of Elijah is attached. It is overshadowed by large oaks, probably the remains of an ancient sacred grove. These tombs are held in great veneration by both Jews and Samaritans, a fact which goes far to prove their authenticity. Mohammedans also esteem them sacred. The district around them may thus he the place called by the historian in this verse the hill of Phinehas. P.]

C.] ence of the great and good on earth is quickly stopped by death. But when our fathers fail, and since our prophets do not live for ever, what a mercy is it that our Redeemer liveth, and will be with us always, even unto the end of the world!

And was not Joshua a noted type of him, our Captain of salvation, who brings many sons and daughters to glory! God solemnly called him to, and fitted him for, his mediatorial office: and in his baptism at Jordan's banks began to magnify him before the people; nor did he ever fail him or forsake him. Made under and trained up in servitude to Moses' broken law, he became fit for his work; and even his name is pregnant with manifold and everlasting salvation. Through what Jordans of trouble and death does he bring his church into her gospel form, and her true members into their spiritual and celestial state! He circumcises their hearts, and feasts them on his flesh and blood, to prepare them for their spiritual warfare on earth. He powerfully intercedes for them, and makes up all breaches between God and them. Miraculously and wisely he conquers all their enemies, treads them under their feet, and enriches them with their spoil. He purchased and prepares for them the promised, the heavenly Canaan; and in due time puts them into the full and quiet possession thereof, according to his Father's purpose and promise. Having come into the bond of the covenant, he weans them from their idolatry, and makes them serve the Lord, was standing there, and when he received from God his and great cheerfulness and gratitude ought to take and walk as he also walked.
